Notes from the editor

The Civil War has been of special interest to me, and I have found, in my own research, that it was often as many have said, "Brother against Brother." The reason for this is that neither the north, nor the "solid" south, were as united in sections as we may have thought.

An example of this was reported in the National Geographic in October 1975. The following was extracted.

"When Alabama seceded from the Union, the tough mountaineers of Winston County, in effect, seceded from Alabama. On July 4, 1861, they declared: 'We are not going to shoot at the flag of our fathers, 'Old Glory', the Flag of Washington, Jefferson, and Jackson.' Thus was born an Alabama legend, the Free State of Winston.

On the heels of the Conscription Act of April 1862, Confederate recruiters combed the county; houses were burned, resisters were shot or jailed. The carnage was finally too much for the mountaineers. More than 2,000 men of Winston and surrounding areas volunteered for the First Alabama Cavalry Regiment, which fought for three years in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, and the Carolinas. From the Confederate standpoint there was only one thing amiss: The First Alabama Cavalry served in the Union Army."

This Regiment was not made up only of men from Alabama, but from other Southern areas, even from near Atlanta, Georgia. So, if your people didn't serve where you've been searching, consider other alternatives.

If the ancestor served in the Union Army and applied for a pension, the information should be easily obtained from the Military Records in Washington, D.C. But, if he served in the Confederate Army, they may be more difficult to locate. The Confederate Pensions were not paid, as one would suppose, by the state for which the Veteran served. Instead, they were paid by the state in which he was living when he applied for the pension.

For instance, if your pensioner lived in Georgia during the war, and served in the Confederate Army there; then in later life moved to Texas, and eventually applied for a pension, the papers will be found in Texas, not Georgia.

This issue concludes the publications due in 1980.

In the future, I plan to have our publications ready for distribution at our regular meeting dates in February, May, August, and November. The future issues will cover a variety of records and information in each issue. The limited variety in these three issues was necessitated by the time factor. All contributions of queries and material will be appreciated.
