SUTTER AND YUBA COUNTIES

SUTTER COUNTY

Sutter County, named in honor of John A. Sutter, was one of the original 27 counties of California when the state was divided in 1850.

The spanish expedition led by Gabriel Moraga camped on the lower Feather River on October 9, 1808. From here he crossed the river near the present town of Nicolaus and traveled overland seven leagues north to a small mountain range in the middle of the valley (the Sutter Buttes).

The next recorded visit to Sutter County by the Spanish was in 1817 when Padre Presidente Mariano Payeras requested mission sites be selected for construction in the north Sacramento Valley area. This later expedition was led by Father Narciso Duran.

The first recorded American to set foot on Sutter County soil was the famous mountain man, Jedediah S. Smith, in 1828, soon to be followed by the fur trappers of the Hudson Bay Company.

As a valley abundant with wildlife, including large concentration of beaver, trappers found prosperity with little trouble from the unwaring Indians.

The Sutter Buttes, located in the northern portion of the County, were utilized by both the Indians and whites as a look-out point. John C. Fremont, the pathfinder, camped at the base of the Buttes from May 30 to June 8, 1846. A monument stands in Fremont's honor on the Butte Road and can be seen by passing motorists.

The bulk of what is now Sutter County was deeded by the Spanish to John Sutter. In conjunction with the Sacramento Rancho of "New Helvetia" (headquarters in what is now the city of Sacramento), Sutter had other Ranchos, including the "Hock Farm". Historians have speculated for years as to the meaning of "hock". It is now assumed to be a corruption of the German word "hoch" or "upper". A simple man with no knowledge of English before arriving in America, it is assumed this naming was a result of a misunderstanding. Livestock was transplanted to the hock farm in 1840, and an adobe house was constructed in late 1841. This rancho became Sutter's main stock ranch, and until they were butchered by the goldseekers in 1850-51, boasted cattle and sheep ranging from the Buttes south between the Sacramento and Feather Rivers.

Sutter, unable to control his properties in Sacramento and after seeing his property destroyed or possessed by squatters in the now state capitol city, moved to the hock farm, and a large home was built. He made an attempt to semi-fortify the grounds with protective fencing and steel entrance doors. The farm was damaged by floods in the 1860's, but the crowning blow to Sutter was the destruction of the main building by a fire set by vandals. Sutter left the ruins of "Hock Farm" in 1868.

The first county seat was Oro. "A noble city of broad streets, imposing buildings, and splendid public squares", so stated State Senator Thomas J. Green when he convinced the state to declare the land he had bought from Sutter the county seat. Unfortunately, although the "city" was laid out on paper, there were no buildings. Being resourceful, Senator Green erected a 20 x 20 foot zinc building for court to convene. After looking around their "county seat", a motion was made to change the location to a town with more than one building. The motion passed.

Nicolaus, the trading post of Nicolaus Algiers, was established because of the need of a ferry across the Feather River. Nicolaus, an ex-Hudson Bay trapper was employed by Sutter, and in lieu of receiving wages, he was given one square mile of land. Nicolaus built a hotel in 1849, and within a year 300 lots were sold, as well as a dozen stores erected. The second county seat was established in Nicolaus in 1850 and remained until the following year.

1851 found the county seat moved from Nicolaus to Auburn. With Auburn becoming the county seat of the newly formed Placer County, the seat moved to Vernon. Another town once owned by Sutter, Vernon was sold as the ".... most eligible position for a town in the whole northern region...". Located at the confluence of the Sacramento and Feather Rivers, it was thought to be ideally suited for a river transportation landing. Until the town was built, the site was as far north as boats could travel up the Feather River towards the "diggins". The heavy rains in 1849-1850 caused the Feather River to rise enough to permit river travel to Marysville. This was the beginning of the end of Vernon.

With the fall of Vernon, Nicolaus regained the seat of Sutter County in 1852. Nicolaus lost it in 1854 for a few months to Yuba City, then regained it again for two more years until it was permanently established in Yuba City after an election in June of 1856.

Yuba City, the current county seat of Sutter County, was founded by Samuel Brannan, Pierson Reading, and Henry Cheever on land bought from John Sutter. Sam Brannan (California's first self-made millionaire) had known Sutter since 1846 and had built the first retail stores in the Sacramento Valley on land owned by Sutter and had also bought one fourth of the City of Sacramento from Sutter. In an effort to prolong the bankruptcy he was facing due to the influx of trespassers and thieves, Sutter deeded the town site to Brannan and his partners for a token amount. As the senior partner in the venture, Brannan had the town site layed out and hired agents to sell lots. Unfortunately, the Feather River was an early obstacle to Yuba City inasmuch as the Mother Lode country lay to the east of the river, and Yuba City was on the west bank.

Though ferries were built, it was easier and faster to travel by boat to Marysville (right across the river) than travel by stage, horse, or foot north to the gold fields. Yuba City grew slowly until after the gold rush; then, with the realization that the wealth of California lay not in gold but in selling the miners food and supplies, the fertile land surrounding Yuba City became the catalyst to make the growth that had been denied in earlier years a reality. In 1852 Yuba City had one hotel, one grocery store, 12 saloons, a blacksmith, and about 20 houses. The city was incorporated under the general law provisions of the state on January 23, 1908 with a population of 3,600. The rich farmland of Sutter County (the upper 2% of fertile land in the state) had placed the county in a high category of productivity and insured Yuba City a steady growth rate in the future.

YUBA COUNTY

Yuba County, one of the state's original 27 counties, was named in one of two ways. Some claim the name "Yuba" is a corruption of the Spanish word "Uba", meaning "grapes" and was given as a result of the wild grapes growing along the banks of the Feather River. Others claim "Yuba" was named after the tribe of Maidu Indians, the Yu-ba, who live on the banks of the Feather River.

The first recorded white men to visit Yuba County was the Spanish expedition led by Gabriel Moraga, who camped on the lower Feather River on October 9, 1808 before crossing enroute to the Sutter Buttes in Sutter County.

A large portion of Yuba County was granted by Mexico to John A. Sutter. In the fall of 1842, Sutter leased to Theodore Cordua the land on which now rests the City of Marysville. Cordua used the land for raising livestock and in 1843 built a home with a trading post attached at what is now the southern end of "D" Street.

Cordua obtained an additional seven leagues of land from the Mexican government on a grant appertinent to the land leased from Sutter.

A former employee of Cordua's, Charles Covillaud, bought one-half of the ranch in 1848. The other half was sold to two brothers-in law of Covillaud's wife, Michael G. Nye and William Foster in January, 1849. It was known as Nye's Ranch at that time, but in September of 1849, Foster and Nye sold their interest to Covillaud. In October of the same year, Covillaud sold all but one-fourth of the Rancho to Jose Ramirez, John Sampson and Theodore Sicard.

As a result of the gold rush, and as the Rancho was ideally situated for a point of debarkation for arriving boats filled with miners, a town was laid out by the four partners in 1850. Covillaud's wife, the former Mary Murphy who was a member of the ill-fated Donner Party, was given the honor of having a new town named for her.

Due to its prime geographical location, Marysville became the center of trade for the northern mines. It controlled river traffic for those wishing to travel goods and men from the central Sacramento Valley to the rich gold fields and "diggins" of Yuba, Nevada, Butte, and Placer counties.

As the county grew, so grew the county seat, Marysville. As the trading center for most of the gold rush activities going through the Valley, Marysville was assured a steady growth rate. In 1857 alone, $10 million in gold was shipped from local banks to the mints. As a result of hydraulic mining to the north, the Yuba riverbed was rising at an alarming rate. Marysville began an energetic levee construction project to protect the city from flooding. The only temple in the nation built by the Chinese to honor the Water God, Bok-Kai, was built in Marysville and still stands to protect the city from flooding. Many interesting old homes and buildings are still in use dating to the gold rush era including the Aaron home, built in 1856, St. Joseph's Catholic Church, built in 1855, and others. Until the mid 1960's, a large number of buildings (including the first Macy's) remained standing. Unfortunately, due to the requirements of urban development, many of these stone or brick buildings were razed to make room for new development.

Wheatland, an incorporated city south of Marysville, was the first settlement reached by the '49ers who crossed the mountains over the California trail, which went over Donner Pass into the Sacramento Valley. An employee of John Sutter received a five league land grant from the Mexican government in 1844. His goods and cattle were auctioned off for $150. William Johnson and Sebastian Kerner split their new Rancho into two equal parts. The present site of Wheatland was known as Johnson's Rancho. Johnson was the first husband of Mary Murphy, who later married Charles Covillaud, one of the founders of Marysville.

Gold was thought first discovered in Yuba County on June 2, 1848, by Jonas Spector at a place later known as Rose's Bar. As a result of mining activities, John Rose and William Reynolds opened a store near the Placer mining site. By 1850, 2,000 men were working this site.

Other Placer mining was conducted at Squaw Creek, Lander's Bar, Malay, Bullards Bar, Ferry Bar, Foster's Bar, Stoney Bar, Oregon Bar, French Bar, Pittsburgh Bar, Texas Bar, Willow Bar, Sicard's Bar, Negro Bar, Horse Bar, Long Bar, National Bar, and many other Yuba River locations all of which were small communities containing from 50 to 500 miners.

The richest of all Yuba River bars was Parks Bar. David Parks, his wife, and his children arrived on September 8, 1848, and left for the east via ship with all the gold he and his family could carry.

As a result of hydraulic mining, all of the old river gold bearing bars were covered with no less than 60 feet of tailing and debris. Today, all that remains of these rich bars are the names of a few townships and school districts such as Parks' Bar Township and Rose Bar Township and school.

In the center of hydraulic mining activities lay the town of Smartville, founded through the construction of a hotel built by a Mr. Smart in early 1856. Remains of rich mines that operated in the 1850's through 1870's can be seen near the town that has as an entering landmark the still-utilized Catholic Church, built in 1861, destroyed by fire in 1870, and rebuilt the following year.

A close neighbor of Smartville is the once thriving town of Timbuctoo. Mining in the ravines near town was underway in 1850. The town was named for one of the first miners who was a black from Africa. Once with a population of 1,200, all that remains of this once proud city is the broken remains of the Wells Fargo office and Stewart Brothers store.

North of Smartville and Timbuctoo was the busy town of Camptonville, named for a well-liked blacksmith named Robert Campton. The first commercial building was a hotel built in 1850, followed soon after by the miners working their way north through the county. Camptonville was built on the main road from Marysville, the county seat, to Nevada City and Downieville. Pack trains, horsemen, and the California Stage Company used the toll road completed in 1854. With the discovery of gold to the east of town, Camptonville began growing seriously. By 1866 the town contained 1,500 residents. The main street was a mile long of planks and was lined with over 30 stores, a number of hotels, and the usual high ratio of saloons. Camptonville today is a sleepy town rich with gold rush heritage and charm. In the center of town is a bronze plaque noting the spot where Lester A. Pelton invented one of the great mining and later power aids, the Pelton Wheel. Many of the old buildings are still standing and most are in continuous use.

As a result of the need to protect settlers and miners, the military post of Camp Far West was established in 1849 approximately five miles east of the present city of Wheatland. Two companies of troops were stationed there under the command of Captain Hannibal Day. Due to a lack of Indian uprisings (the miners had been successful in killing most of them), the post was abandoned in 1852.

Yuba County is still utilizing the assets that gave wealth to it during the gold rush era to make it a county with a future. The river that supplied the miners with transportation now affords the county with irrigation water, hydro-electric power, and recreation. Yuba County, rich in agriculture, is growing in light manufacturing and distribution industry, as well as having Beale Air Force Base within the county boundaries. Yuba is a growing county that can indeed claim a rich heritage.

William Crombie
1857 - 1942

Mr. Crombie was born about seven miles north of Thornhill, Ontario, Canada. Thornhill is a small country village north of Toronto, serving a farming district. He lived with his parents on a small farm. When he was two years of age, his father died. He did not have the advantage of most children and when old enough to attend school, he went to the village of Thornhill and worked for his board and room, and in this way he received three years of schooling. As soon as he was old enough, he began working at odd jobs and accumulated money enough to take him to Seaforth where he started farming. He remained at Seaforth until 1880, when he made a trip to Dakota Territory to take up land. He took the train to Goderich, Ontario where he took a boat to Duluth, Minnesota. From Duluth, he took the train to Emmerson, Manitoba, then walked across the Canadian Border to Pembina. A distance of two miles, where he secured a team and buggy. He then drove to the Tiner Settlement near the Pembina Mountains and located on a claim in Township one hundred sixty two, Range fifty four, Section seven.

After filing on the claim, he returned the horses and buggy to the owner at Pembina. He then decided to see the country so he took passage on the steamer to Winnipeg, where he visited for a few days. Again he took the steamer down the Assinaboine River to Smart's Landing and walked across to Portage La Prairie, a distance of four miles. Mr. Crombie made the acquaintance of two Englishmen on his trip down the river. One of the men suggested that they visit the Indian Camp on the outskirts of Portage La Prairie to see how the Indians lived. The three men approached the camp a little cautiously. Mr. Crombie remained a short distance from the camp while the two Englishmen went over to the tepees. An Indian Buck took exception to the Englishmen because they became too familiar with his Squaw. He went out among the tepees and soon returned with reinforcements. The Englishmen saw the Buck coming with five of his tribesmen and they ran for the river with the Indians at their heels. They jumped aboard the Steamer while the Indians returned to their camp. Mr. Crombie couldn't help but laugh to see the Englishmen running for their lives.

Mr. Crombie walked across the prairie and caught the boat at a point opposite Smart's Landing. The boat had to go around a big bend in the river which required several hours to make. Again he took passage on the boat to Poplar Point, just South of Brandon, Manitoba. After visiting Brandon, Mr. Crombie returned by boat to Winnipeg and then by train to Seaforth. Mr. Crombie remained at Seaforth during the winter of 1880, and was married to Mary Manson on March 4th, 1881. He and Mrs. Crombie's brother, James Manson, loaded an emigrant car at Centralia, near Seaforth, on March 17th, 1881 and left their old home in train load of emigrant movables and stock for Emmerson, Manitoba. After the immigration inspector had checked over their carload they drove to Mr. Crombie's claim a distance of fifty miles. Mr. Manson took up a claim adjoining Mr. Crombie's. They bought some rough lumber and built shanties twelve feet by eighteen feet, with but one window and one door.

Mrs. Crombie, Mrs. Manson, and Mr. Crombie's mother took the train in April 1881, and traveled via Chicago, Minneapolis and Crookston to Emmerson, where Mr. Crombie and Mr. Manson met them and took them to their new homes. There they started their pioneer lives on the prairies of North Dakota.

Mr. Crombie and his wife spent the summer and winter of 1881, and 1882, on their claim. In the spring of 1882, Mr. Crombie and his mother each bought a pre-emption of a quarter section at a dollar and a quarter per acre near Young's Post Office (now concrete). Mr. Crombie built a log house on his pre-emption and moved his entire belongings to this new home. There was considerable timber on his new farm which afforded him fuel and also logs to build his house and barn with. Some of his neighbors formed a bee and helped him build a log house on his mother's pre-emption.

In approximately 1884, Mr. Waite, a missionary, began making regular calls to the settlement giving sermons at the settlers homes. He came by horse and buggy from Elmwood, just across the Canadian Border. Reverend Waite often stopped at the Crombie home. On one of these visits, Mrs. Crombie suggested that a log church be constructed. Reverend Waite thought this a good idea and he asked Mr. Crombie to call a meeting and arrangements were made to have each settler haul a log to a location selected to erect the log church. Mr. Crombie let the settlers who did not have timber on their farms haul a log from his farm as he had plenty of timber. Arrangements were made with the Presbyterians, who had some funds, to finance the lumber for the roof, taking a lien on the church as security. The church was erected in 1885, and the congregation were Methodists, Baptists, and Presbyterians. This little log church served as a hall as well as a church and all township meetings and community gatherings were held there. The old log church still stands (a remembrance of pioneer days) at the junction of Highway number Five, near Concrete. It has been vacant for sometime, as a Baptist Church as been erected in Concrete.

In the winter of 1882, Mr. and Mrs. Crombie drove to a neighbor's farm to see how their oxen were doing as they had let the neighbor use their oxen for the winter. Mr. Crombie left his wife and his team of horses at a neighbor West's farm while he continued on foot to the home of the neighbors who had the oxen. A severe snow storm developed while he was visiting his neighbors, but Mr. Crombie thought he would not have any trouble locating Neighbor West's farm so he started out. In a short time he had returned to the place from which he had started, having walked in a circle. Again he started out for the West's, again walking in a circle. He informed his neighbor that he could not locate his neighbor West, so this neighbor took him out and told him to turn until the storm struck him in the side of the face and he would have no trouble finding West's place. This he did and he made his destination without further trouble.

In 1911, Mr. Crombie moved to Backoo to live. He took charge of an elevator and remained there until 1931, when he moved to Grand Forks, N.D. retiring from active work.

YUBA COUNTY JURY LISTS

In 1850, Marysville was a well laid out town at the confluence of the Yuba and Feather rivers. The houses were tents, the hotels canvas walled and the saloons a board suspended between two barrels. The freight off the boats from San Francisco was loaded directly onto mule trains or large freight wagons which would pull out to the high country to supply the miners along the upper streams.

The men listed on the jury lists may not be named in any other place. Others will have bought farms or built stores. Many returned to the East with gold but more without. All these jury lists prove is that they were in Yuba County for a while.

Names of persons serving on Juries taken from Court of Sessions, County Court Jury Fund Book, Yuba County, 1850.
