

SELECTED DEATH NOTICES
FROM
JACKSON COUNTY, KANSAS, NEWSPAPERS
VOLUME IV
1897-1899

COMPILED BY DAN FENTON

INTRODUCTION

At the beginning of the time period covered by this volume, there were six newspapers being published in Holton, The Holton Weekly Recorder, The Holton Weekly Signal, Normal Advocate, University Informer, The Tribune, and The Kansas Sunflower. The University Informer ceased publication June 1898, and the Normal Advocate, in March 1899. Both were publications of Campbell University.

The Soldier Clipper, and the Circleville News, continued in their respective cities.

In Whiting, the Sun ceased its publication January 28, 1898, but the Whiting Journal newspaper soon replaced it on February 18, 1898.

In Netawaka, the Netawaka Herald ceased publication on June 30, 1899.

In Denison, the Hummer began publication on January 10, 1899, and ceased March 15, 1899.

As noted in the previous volumes, not every death reported in these newspapers is included in this book, only those seeming to have some connection with Jackson county. A death notice could appear in different newspapers and from different sources within a paper. One principal notice is listed with excerpts from other accounts being used only when there is differing or additional information. Accolades to the deceased success as a Christian, parent and citizen have been deleted when possible, because of space consideration. Three ellipses denote the deletion of part of a sentence and four that of a sentence or even paragraphs.

Each death notice is numbered consecutively and it is this number that appears in the index, not the page number. This is an all surname index that I hope will help the researcher identify family relationships that otherwise would be hidden. The index begins on page 713.

As with any book of this type there have been mistakes made in transferring the information from the newspapers to book form. If you believe there should be a death notice for your ancestor and it is not included, or other information is not correct, please check the original newspapers for that time period.

3055. Hollis Tucker, one of the most prominent business men of our city, died at his residence on west Fourth street, Sunday, March 28, 1897, aged 66 years, 10 months and 20 days. Hollis Tucker was born at Leesburg, Carrol county, Ohio, May 25, 1830. He was educated in the common schools of Ohio and at the academy of Albany, Ohio. In 1853 he married Miss Sarah A. McKeever, and in 1858 they came to Kansas, but returned to Ohio the same year. During the rebellion Mr. Tucker served in the 151st regiment, Co. I., O.V.I, as commissary sargeant. In his absence Mrs. Tucker kept the postoffice and took care of the little family. They again came to Kansas in 1865, locating in Holton in July of that year. In 1866 Mr. Tucker engaged in merchandising, which he has followed continuously to the present time. Mr. Tucker has been prominently connected with nearly every public enterprise that has benefitted and helped build up our city. In the contest of locating the county seat and building the courthouse he was one of the leaders. He perhaps did as much to secure the building of the Kansas Central railway to Holton as any other single man, and his labor and zeal was not less effectual in securing the Rock Island and Northwestern railroads. In building up Campbell University he has from the first stood shoulder to shoulder with the leaders of that enterprise, and for the past ten years has served as the president of the board of directors of that institution. Some four years ago on the death of County Treasurer George Lowell, Mr. Tucker was appointed to the office, and at the next general election he was elected to serve out Mr. Lowell's unexpired term, and also for a new term of two years, and it is generally conceded that the county never had a more competent, honest and faithful official When his country needed his services as a soldier he left his store and postoffice to the care of his wife and went to the front as a private in the ranks He leaves his wife and seven children living, H. C. Tucker, Miss Mary Rose, Misses Florence and Clara, of this place; Mack, in the employ of the Rock Island at Clyde; Sherd, train dispatcher on the Northwestern, and Will, engaged in mining in Colorado

3063. From the Muscotah Record of April 2 we clip the following notice of the death and obituary of an old and respected Jackson county citizen: Nicholas Kline was born in Amsterdam, New York, Dec. 15, 1834 and died at his residence near TvIuseotah, Kansas, March 30, 1897, at the age of 62 years, 3 months and 14 days. He was educated in the earlier years in the common schools and afterward attended Tribes Hill Academy, New York. At the age of 21 he came to Chicago from his New York home, spending about one year there in the employ of the Northwestern railroad company, but was called home at the end of that time to act as deputy sheriff under his father who had been elected sheriff. But the west seemed to have a special attraction for the then young man and in a little more than a year we find him again in Illinois where he remained about one year after which he plunged into the then wild and sparsely settled country of Colorado, spending four years in and near Denver. In 1862 he went to Leavenworth, Kansas, but did not stay there long and returned to Illinois where he remained until 1869. At that date he was married to Elizabeth Maxwell and the young people immediately left Illinois to settle in Jackson county, Kans., southwest of Muscotah 4 miles A son came to them in 1871 to cheer them on their way. Then another child was born, a daughter. Then another year passed and death made its first visit to their home and the first born was taken. The little girl grew into girlhood and then another son was born. The daughter's home is at Medford, Oklahoma, the son, 13 years old, is with the mother The Holton Weekly Signal, April 7, 1897.

Whiting. April 5, 1897. Nick Cline, of Cream Ridge, this county, died on Tuesday evening and was buried at Muscotah on Thursday. He was a Mason, Odd Fellow and an old resident of nearly thirty years The Holton Recorder, April 8, 1897.

.... In 1892 he was nominated on the Republican ticket for representative in the legislature and elected over Mr. Shellaberger by 193 majority. He was one of the immortal sixty-three who composed the legal legislature, commonly called the "Douglass house", in contradiction to the mob dominated the Dunsmore house, and with his colleague, Mr. Pomeroy, generally headed the procession when it was necessary to form in column and force the way through the Populist mob. 3124. The venerable Martin Anderson, father of Major T. J. Anderson, died of old age at the home of his son, 215 Clay street, at 12 o'clock yesterday afternoon The interment will be in Topeka cemetery. Major Anderson was born on the farm of his parents, James and Sarah Anderson, in Columbia county, Ohio, September 17, 1817. There were eleven boys and three girls in the family. His father died at the early age of 42, and his mother in her 63d year. Martin attended the district schools in his native county, and in 1833, at the age of 16 was apprenticed to a carpenter in Pittsburgh, Pa. Having learned his trade he returned to Ohio. April 19, 1838, he married Ellen Rauch and settled in Portage county, where his son Thomas was born in 1839. In politics, as early as 1842, Mr. Anderson indentified himself with the antislave party, then called the "Liberty party", and voted for John P. Hale, the presidential candidate on the Free soil ticket in 1852. He served three years as justice of the peace of Stark county, Ohio, having resided in that county since 1840. In June, 1857, he removed to Grasshopper Falls, Kan., remaining there until January, 1858, when he settled on a farm he had purchased in Calhoun, now Jackson county, some eight miles northwest of Holton, near the present site of the town of Circleville. As he had emigrated to Kansas for the purpose of helping make it a free state, he from the first took an active part in politics. In the spring of 1858 he was elected probate judge of Calhoun county, and served one term. March 12, 1859, Mr. Anderson was instrumental in forming the first Republican organization in the territory. He called a meeting for that object, which was held in the school house in Holton; only twelve men participating. After the organization was completed and the meeting adjourned, the little party was assaulted by a mob of drunken proslavery ruffians. Major Anderson was struck in the back of the head with a oak stick three feet long, (the heart of a cap-board bolt) in the hands of a burly ruffian. He fell to the ground and the ruffian deliberately emptied his revolver at the prostrate form, but without further injury. The Free-State men rallied at once, secured their Sharpes' rifles and drove the ruffians from town and across the river into Missouri. One of the ruffians was shot through the mouth as he mounted his horse to leave, and another lost his good right arm as the result of another shot from a Sharpes' rifle ... Mr. Anderson, while being an outspoken free-state man, had not provoked the enmity of his pro-slavery neighbors, and the attack on him had been unpremeditated. Mr. Anderson was made insensible by the blow, and was removed to the home of Mr. Parks, in Holton, where he remained unconscious from 4:00 Saturday to the following Wednesday at midnight. It was three weeks before he could be brought home to the farm, and six months before he recovered sufficiently to resume his ordinary avocation. The effects of the blows never left him In the fall of 1860, Mr. Anderson was elected a member of the territorial legislature of 1861, and was elected to the house of representatives of the state legislature of 1862. At this session he was chairman of the investigating committee which impeached the state officers charge with the fraudulent sale of the bonds of the state, issued under acts of the first state legislature. At the breaking out of the war Mr. Anderson desired to enlist, much to the dissatisfaction of his family, as the only son, Thomas J., was already in the service, but in 1862 his wife gave her consent and he entered the army of the frontier as a private, but was elected captain of Company B, Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Infantry. He was promoted to the rank of major November 22, 1863, and received further promotion as colonel by brevet March 13, 1864. He participated in the battles of old Fort Wayne, IT., Cane Hill, Prairie Grove and Van Buren, Ark. During Price's raid Major Anderson was in command of a battalion of Kansas cavalry at the battles of Lexington, at Little Blue or Westport, Mo., and followed Price's retreating army to Webster Falls, I.T. the Kansas troops had scarce rations during this march; only what the boys' picked up as they went along, and Major Anderson did not have his clothes off for thirty-one days. Towards the last of February, 1865, Major Anderson's regiment was ordered to the mountains to fight Indians. He was placed in command of troops to guard the emigrant trains and telegraph lines along the road from Fort Laramie to South Pass. Several important skirmishes were had prior to August 1, when the Indians came down on his command at Platte Bridge, Wyoming, fifteen hundred strong. There were but ninety-five men in Major Anderson's command, and as the Indians had cut off the telegraph wires in both directions before making their appearance all chances of reinforcements were cut off. The small building used as a mail station at this place offered no protection. A battle was fought out on the open prairie lasting two days, the Indians fighting in regular Indian fashion, but were finally defeated and driven off. Major Anderson lost twenty-six enlisted men and one lieutenant killed in this engagement. How many Indians were killed was never known, but there seems to have been a large number of killed and wounded, from the large number of telegraph poles they used in making litters to transport the bodies. In a recent conversation about the fight, Major Anderson said: "How we ever whipped the Indians and got away alive I could never tell. When they left we had only a few rounds of ammunition left and but a handful of ablebodied men. They have a particular way of fighting. They rode in a circle, and when they came into range they would lay close on the side of the horse, nothing visible but their foot above the horse's neck. We could not get at them much that way. We could only kill the ponies, They would perform this maneuver the same as American soldiers. My son Tom recently saw one of the men who fought under me in that battle, now living in Wabunsee county. He referred to the arrows I cut from his back and from the calves of his legs after the fight. Major Anderson and troops came home immediately after the battle, and were mustered out the last of August, 1865. Major Anderson was elected treasurer of Kansas in 1866, serving one term. He then went out of politics except to work and vote with the good old partyMajor Anderson was superintendent of construction of the state capital building in 1883, and the repairs on the senate chamber. At the close of his term as state treasurer he took up his residence in Holton, and was twice elected mayor of the city. Since 1892 he had made his home with his son, Major T. J. Anderson, in Topeka. His wife, who died in Topeka. September 4, 1891, was also a member with her husband of the Methodist church. They had two children, a son, Thomas J. Anderson, and a daughter, Mrs. Luticia A. Mrs. Thomas Hatch, of this city, received the sad intelligence last week of the violet death of a cousin living in Oklahoma, the following account of which was in the Kansas City Star: The body of Frank. Billheimer, once a barber of Kansas City, who was killed at Pond Creek, Ok., arrived here early this morning and was buried in the Elmwood cemetery. Some time ago Billheimer went to Oklahoma and settled on a claim near Pond Creek. He had his barber shop in town and drove out to the claim every night. Last Thursday evening a man saw Billheimer display a roll of money. He told Billheimer he had a cow to sell cheap and enticed him to a house where he beat his head in with a hatchet and broke his arm. He then jumped on the body and kicked it, and finally threw it on the railroad track. Billheimer, however, revived enough to crawl to the hotel and tell the name of his murderer, when he died. The murderer of Billheimer was arrested last night. His name is not known here yet. 3167. Last spring Mr. J. H. Bateman had in his employ a Swede farm hand by the name of N. S. Wilbur. He was an industrious, hard working fellow, and was in possession of a thousand dollar mortgage on land in Allen county, Kansas, and also a mortgage for a smaller amount. When he left Mr. Bateman's place in the summer he expressed an intention of selling the thousand dollar mortgage and fitting himself out with the necessary supplies to make the trip to the Klondike gold fields. Mr. Bateman knows nothing of Wilbur's relatives or connections, and when he left his employer suggested that he leave with him the name and address of his father, or some friend in his native country, so that he could notify them in case of any mishap to Wilbur. For some reason however, the request was not complied with, but he did carry away with him a letter of recommendation from Mr. Bateman. Nothing more was heard of the Scandinavian until a few days ago, when Mr. Bateman received a communication from John U. Smith concessionaire at Dyea, Alaska, stating that the drowned body of Wilbur had been found near there, and the only mark of identification discovered on his person was the letter of recommendation written by his former employer. Dyea is situated on the extreme southern coast of Alaska, at the head of a mountain pass leading to the new Eldorado. Wilbur, it seems, had chosen the land route, and had gotten as far as the coast with his cargo when through some accident he met his death by drowning in the straits near Dyea. The letter also stated that scarcely enough money and effects were found on Wilbur to pay his funeral expenses, and suggested that his friends be notified of his death, if their whereabouts were known The Holton Recorder, September 23, 1897.

Two boys, Frank and Henry, and Alice, Georgia Goddard and Mollie Witt. The Holton Recorder, October 7, 1897.

C. A. Eames, a notice of whose sudden and unexpected death was in last week's Recorder, was born in Upton, Massachusetts, August 14, 1827, and was at his death seventy years, one month and twenty days old. Colonel grew to manhood amid the rugged hills of his New England home, and there he was married December 1, 1847, to Mrs. Elizabeth Zick, of Westboro, Massachusetts. At Upton he established a boot and shoe manufactory which he conducted until 1851, when he removed to Broyesville, East Tenn. There, in connection with his shoe factory, he established a large tannery and was so successful in that business that when the war broke out in 1861, he was not only doing a large business, but had accumulated considerable property and was regarded as one of the leading business men of East Tennessee. The war, of course, soon ruined his business. He took south with him his New England imbued patriotism and antipathy to slavery, and was not slow in taking his place among the staunch and unconquerable union men of that section Col. Eames did not enlist in the army for the reason that his associates argued that he could accomplish more for the cause by remaining a loyal citizen. The events which followed proved the correctness of his friends judgment. Col. Eames was the counsellor, adviser and friend of most of the Union generals that commanded in that section, and by reason of his knowledge of the country and people, rendered them invaluable aid during the various campaigns conducted during the four years of strife. One one occasion, by his energy and

... and would have saved the 10v if the commander had taken his advise. It was for this service that the army officers gave him the complimentary title of colonel. After the war Colonel Eames was a delegate to the constitutional convention, called by Andrew Johnson, and assisted in making the new constitution of Tennessee which excluded human slavery and gave the state a good system of free schools. In 1866 he was sent as a delegate to a loyal convention held at Philadelphia, called for the purpose of sustaining congress in its contest with the Johnson administration. July 22, 1868, Colonel Eames suffered a domestic bereavement in the death of his wife, with whom he had lived nearly twenty-one years, and who had bourn him eight children, five of whom survive both father and mother, as follows: Miss Alice L. Eames, Frank C. Eames, Mrs. Georgia Goddard, and Mrs. J. C. Witt, all of Whiting, and Henry A. Eames, of Persimmon, Okla. Col. Eames, with his family, came to Kansas in 1868, and settled in Whiting township on land purchased f'om the Central Branch Railroad Company. The effect of the war left him, financially almost ruined, and his removal to this state was an effect to retrieve his fortune With his oldest daughter, Alice, as his housekeeper, he made a home The Holton Recorder, October 14, 1897.

Circleville. March 1, 1898. The bodies of James Stirton who died two years ago last August and his little daughter Ethel who has been dead about four years, were removed from our cemetery to the Muscotah cemetery. Mr. Stirton was a large man in life, weighing over three hundred pounds and it was found impossible to lift him from the grave without the aid of a derrick, which was also used to get the body into the wagon. Some thought it was petrified, as they estimated the weight to be nearly 1,000 pounds, but as the coffin and the bodies were thoroughly water soaked it is not strange that the weight should be something out of the ordinary. The Holton Weekly Signal, March 2, 1898.

3293. Died. At Hiawatha, Kan., Feb. 24, 1898, Mrs. Mary A. Smith, mother of Mrs. S. A. Alt. For some time she has been very feeble, but feeling a little stronger, she thought herself strong enough to visit her son in Hiawatha. Soon after reaching there she took sick, and growing gradually worse for a few days, she sent for her daughter, but the end was near at hand. Mrs. Smith was born at Martinsburg, Va., Feb. 11, 1826. At an early age she consecrated herself to her Master's service and united with the Reformed church. In 1847 she (Mary A. Miller) was married to John F. Smith, of Frederick City, Md., where she lived until the death of her husband in 1876. After this she moved to Millersville, and then to Lancaster, Pa., with a view of obtaining better educational advantages for the children still at home. When the children had had nearly all started homes for themselves and four had come to Kansas, she followed them, but always regarded Frederick City, where she held her membership in the Reformed church, as her home. As two of her children and many relatives and friends live in Maryland, she made frequent visits to the east during her temporary stay in Kansas her remains were taken to Frederick, City, Md. ... laid to rest in the service of her Lord, by the side of her husband ... The Holton Recorder, March 3, 1898.

3297. A telegram was received from Mobile Tuesday forenoon, stating that Dr. J. T. Scott died at 6 o'clock that morning and that the family, with the body of the deceased would start home His daughter Mrs. A. J. Ash, left on Friday and arrived in Mobile Sunday afternoon in time to see her father alive, but unconscious The Holton Recorder, March 3, 1898.

John T. Scott, son of Win. T. and Sarah A. Scott, was born at Bainbridge, Indiana, August 8, 1847. When the war broke out in 1861, he was but thirteen years old. He was a steady-going, quiet boy, content, apparently, to grow up and be educated in the common schools and to become a plodding citizen of the community. This might have been the result had it not been for the war. After his two older brothers enlisted, boy as he was, he was not content to stay at home and go to school, but with his associates was continually talking of enlisting and planning to get into the war. It was early in 1863, we believe, when he concluded he could stand it no longer, and with two or three of his associates nearly his age, with only a dollar or two in his pocket, he quietly left home, walked to the station some eight miles distance to take the train for Indianapolis to enlist. His father having his suspicions aroused, took the first train, and when Tom and the other boys got on at Fillmore, Tom's father was about the first person he saw. Mr. Scott went with them to Indianapolis and took them out to camp where the soldiers had winter quarters. and finally persuaded them to return home with him. This experience did not, however, cure the boys of their desire to be soldiers or quench their patriotism. A few months later, in August we believe, they slipped off again and this time they enlisted in the 115th Indiana Infantry for six months. The regiment was sent to East Tennessee, where the severest hardships were encountered on account of lack of supplies of rations and clothing. When the time expired Scott, who was among the number that survived the exposure and destitution, was discharged, after eight months service. This did not cure him or make him contented to stay at home. Three months later he again enlisted, this time in the 18th Indiana Battery, for three years or during the war. At his second enlistment he was only seventeen years old, but had already seen and endured service enough to make him a veteran. The writer of this had just recovered from a long and severe attack of sickness, and was in Chattanooga returning to his battery from a hospital at Lookout Mountain. While waiting for transport he took a walk and accidentally ran across seven recruits, all boys from sixteen to nineteen years of age. Among them were a brother, two cousins, Tom Scott and three other neighbor boys. It is unnecessary to say that they were rejoiced at the opportunity of being taken in charge and of getting speedy transportation to the front, which at that time was Atlanta. The boys were young but all made good soldiers and served with credit until the end of the war, and were honorably discharged. After the war the subject of our sketch spent a year in school at Middleton, Massachusetts, and then entered the office of Dr. J. B. Cross, of Ellettsville, Ind., as a student of medicine. After graduating he practiced for some years at Ashby Station, now called Roachdale, and then came to Kansas in the summer of 1870, settling in this city. While at Ashby, he was married to Miss Ann Shackelford, who died in the fall of 1873, leaving a two year old son, Fred. Some two or three years later the doctor was married to Miss Flora Winters, with whom he had three children, Mrs. Sadie Ash, Don Wallace and Thomas Roswell, are left to mourn for many years held the position of local surgeon of the Rock Island, Union Pacific and Northwestern railroads the family went to Mobile to visit Mrs. Scott's parents. They had been there about two months without any perceptible benefit, when he was suddenly taken with brain fever. The attack came on Tuesday, Feb. 23d. He lived, unconscious most of the time, just a week and died Tuesday morning, March 1st -- Dr. John T. Scott was laid in the cemetery accompanied by the impressive Masonic burial ritual. The Holton Recorder, March 10, 1898.

Robert Gambel Robinson was born in Fulton county, Illinois, April 5, 1861, removed with his parents to Leavenworth county, Kansas, in 1864, was married to Mrs. Frankie Nunnemaker, December 31, 1890, and died at his home in this city, April 18, 1898. Mr. Robinson health has never been robust, either as a boy or man. On this account he was not sent to college and given a classical education, but the lack of a college education did not prevent his intellectual development. When a boy of fifteen he entered Naylor's drug store in this city and remained with them about a year and then went to Philadelphia and graduated in a pharmaceutical institution. Afterwards he engaged in the drug business at Seneca for a year or two. He soon made up his mind he did not like the business and selling out he came to this city and entered the office of Hayden & Hayden as a law student and afterwards, we think, attended the law school at Columbia, Missouri. He was a bright student and made such proficiency that at the age of 29 he was chosen county attorney of this county. We clip, the following in reference from an article entitled, "Jackson-Counties Public Men," published in The Recorder last January, the 6th: "In 1884 R. G. Robinson received the Republican nomination for county attorney, and not having any opposition he was elected without a dissenting vote. Two years later he again received the nomination unanimously and was again elected without opposition. Again in 1888 he was again nominated after serving out his third term Mr. Robinson retired and gave his attention to his rapidly increasing law practice ... invested in a farm on Straight Creek ... In 1894 Mr. Robinson was elected to represent this district in the legislature in 1896, owing to poor health, he declined the renomination He is now the senior partner of the law firm of Robinson, Hurrel and Graham of this city." two children, Helen age 6, and Herbert, 4 ... His parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Robinson are both living in this city ... His other immediate relatives were four sisters, Mrs. [W. H.] McCreary, of Concordia, Mrs. T. K. 3363. James Cherry, the son of Mrs. Elizabeth Arling, died Monday at his mother's home in this city. Jimmy was sadly crippled and yet possessed a cheery nature in spite of the misfortunes that won him many friends. He could do no kind of work and has earned a little by selling cigars and lead pencils on our street for several years. The Holton Recorder, May 12, 1898.

Little Jimmie as he was called by almost everybody is no more. Last winter the dreaded disease consumption fastened its fangs upon him and after lingering four months he succumbed, and on last Saturday morning quietly passed away. Jimmie was known by everybody, his crippled condition claimed the sympathy of everyone he met on the streets. Although badly crippled he was energetic, and always felt that he must earn something so as not to be entirely dependent of his widowed mother. For about five years he sold cigars on our streets and in this way earned many nickels which helped to sustain life. James Cherry was born in Guthirne, Cambridgeshire, England, on September 23, 1869, and at the time of his death was 29 years old. He came to America, with his mother, when fifteen years old, locating at Wetmore, Kansas. He came with his mother to Holton about ten years ago where he resided up to the time of his death. 3369. J. S. Shuck was born in Henry county, Kentucky, Sept. 26, 1837, but at a very early age moved with his parents to Johnson county, Indiana, where he received his early education. At the age of 21 he became assistant teacher in the Hopewell Academy and afterwards taught school in other places. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Company E, 7th Regiment, Indiana volunteers and continued with it until it was dissolved, when he was transferred to the 20th Regiment, Indiana volunteers and was discharged in June, 1865. After his discharge he took a course of law at Bloomington, Ill., then moved to Mason City, Ill., where he began the practice of law. In 1869 he was married to Miss Anna Barrow and they moved to Worthington, Minn., where he continued the practice of law. He was elected to a county office, but on account of poor health was obliged to resign. He then moved to Mantorville, Minn., and edited a newspaper for some years. He was elected county clerk and served for two terms. In 1882 he moved his family to Fullerton, Neb., where he again edited a newspaper. In June 1888 he moved to Holton and for years, on account of poor health was out of business. In 1896 he was elected probate judge, but resigned in November, 1897, on account of failing health. Four children survive him, one having died at the age of three years. A little over a year ago his wife, who had been in failing health for some years, died in Florida, where she had gone the previous autumn with the hope of benefit. This bereavement bore very heavily upon Mr. Shuck, and doubtless hastened his death. Mr. Shuck was a member of the Presbyterian church and was a consistent Christian gentleman. He was also a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the members of that patriotic order together with the W.R.C., conducted the funeral services. The children who by this bereavement are left without earthly father or mother, are Iva, Edith, Gordon and Warren, the latter of whom has just graduated from the Holton High School The Holton Recorder, May 25, 1898.

3398. Commissioner John Franz, of Cross Creek, brought us the sad intelligence of the burning to death of Annie, the eight-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Page, about two weeks ago. They live on the Louch farm on Cross Creek. It appears that the children were playing in the hay loft of the barn. They found some clothing belonging to the hired man. In the vest pocket were some matches and Annie, the oldest girl, struck one trying to see whether it was good or not, set fire to the hay. She at once told the two younger sisters to get down and out, but she herself tried to extinguish the fire; her clothing caught and in a moment she was a victim of the fierce flames. The mother on seeing the flames thought of the horses and and seizing a knife she ran to the barn to free them. Seeing her two children she thought of nothing but they were safe. She was too late to rescue the horses on coming out she asked the children where Annie was. The child bewildered pointed to the burning hay loft, saying "She's up there." A loud shriek and the mother fell fainting to the ground. The fire attracted the neighbors, who found Mrs. Page lying where she fainted. Mr. Page had gone to town and a messenger was sent immediately to bring him home. The news of his little daughter's horrible death almost drove him crazy. After the fire the crisp form of the little girl was taken from the ruins. She was buried a week ago last Monday The Tribune, July 8, 1898.

3401. Edward F. Jones was born near Elmyra, New York, May 6, 1838. In 1852 he moved with his parents to Iowa and settled in Linn county, where he grew up to manhood, and where, August 1, 1861, he enlisted as a Union soldier in the 2d Iowa cavalry, for three years or during the war. When the term of his enlistment expired in 1864, he re-enlisted as a veteran and served until October, 1865, when he received an honorable discharge, and returned to civil pursuits. In 1864, probably while he was home on a veteran furlough, he was married to Miss Sarah A. Pollock, who died, we believe, in the early seventies, leaving him with five children, two of whom, Lillie and Addie, have since died. In 1880, he married to Miss Salina Roby, who with one son, Paul, survives him. When Mr. Jones first come to Jackson county he purchased a farm some three or four miles south of Holton on which he lived, we think, three or four years. These were not good years for the farmers in Kansas, as both drought and grasshoppers scourged the country and he concluded to sell his farm and try his fortune as a citizen of Holton. He had taught school some, and his knowledge of school matters led him into the business of selling school furniture, in which he was moderately successful. In 1880, the death of Sheriff Niswander created a vacancy in that office, and after quite a spirited contest Mr. Jones received the appointment at the hands of Governor John P. St. John. That fall he received the Republican nomination and was elected over Wm. Hedges of Whiting. A year later he was re-elected and served out the full. He made a model sheriff, and if the law had permitted another term he would have been chosen triumphantly. After turning the office of sheriff over to his successor he was elected justice of the peace, in connection with which office he ran a collection agency until 1889, when he was appointed postmaster. He served in this position for five years until the appointment of T. A. Fairchild in 1894. In addition to these offices, Mr. Jones has has efficiently served the city at different times as mayor, councilman, and assessor Some fifteen years ago he joined the Methodist church Frank and Paul are the two sons and Mrs. Lutie Riley and Miss Matie are the two daughters who mourn the loss of their father. In addition to the above, the deceased leaves three brothers, C. L. and F. A., of Bristow, Iowa, and H. E., of Elmyra, New York. These three, with the deceased, were all members of the same company and regiment during the war, and many of our citizens will well remember a few years ago when Ed. F., H. E. and F. A. attended a reunion held in this city, and how we were all entertained by the trio was a prominent member of the A.F.&A.M., the G.A.R., the Modern Woodsman and the Knights of the fireside The Holton Recorder, July 14, 1898.

Company I, 2^d Iowa Cavalry In 1864 he was married to Miss Sarah Pollack, who died in 1879, leaving him with five children, Addie, who died in 1897, Lillie, who died in 1890, Lutie, now Mrs. Geo. F. Riley, Mattie and Frank. In 1873, Mr. Jones came to Jackson county, Kansas, living in Holton for a short time and then settling on a farm four miles south on the eastern edge of the Pottawatomie reserve. It was from his location in this neighborhood that he derived the name of "Pottawatomie Jones," which stuck to him throughout the balance of his life The Holton Weekly Signal, July 13, 1898.

3434. Weslinoreland Signal. Tuesday evening, August 30, 1898, David S. Hatch, one of the pioneer grocers of Westmoreland passed to the Great Beyond. His death was a surprise to many, who did not realize the great suffering the man had endured for three years past. He attended the funeral of his mother at Holton, some years since, and on his return was rained upon, from which rheumatism followed, then that hectic flush, followed by a short, quick cough, and at last he succumbed to that dread disease consumption. D. S. Hatch was born in New York sixty-two years ago; moved from there hence to Wisconsin, where he was married; his wife dying four years later. A daughter was the result of this union, who is now Mrs. Ira S. Taber, wife of the recent cashier of the Blue Rapids State Bank. In 1878 he came to Kansas, locating at Holton. He married Mrs. L. M. Canfield in November of 1883, and in 1885 came to Westmoreland, where he has since resided For years he has been the treasurer for the City of Westmoreland, which office he held at the time of his death The body was laid to rest in the Westmoreland cemetery The Holton Weekly Signal, September 7, 1898.

3436. Miss Estelle Osbon, worn out by the ravages of that fatal disease, consumption, passed away at her home in this city Sunday morning at 3 o'clock. Her death put an end to an illness which has confined her to bed since her return to Holton last April. Born in this city twenty-six years ago, she has spent the greater part of her life here and been educated in our schools. She gained much unpleasant notoriety from her connection with the famous Osbon case a few years ago. Whatever opinions people may have had of her and of her complicity in that deplorable affair, it is conceded by all that her struggle in life was a hard and unequal one, in which the odds apparently constantly against her. Long before her death she made a profession of Christianity and died in the blessedness of the Christian faith. The funeral services ... held at the residence of Mrs. N. Mallinger Mrs. Van Cleve, the matron of the Topeka institution at which the deceased lived for a time, was present at the funeral. The Holton Recorder, September 8, 1898.

Estelle Osbon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Osbon, was born in this city Feb. 24, 1872. When she was quite young her parents moved to Waterville, Marshall county; from there to Pottawatomie and Wabunsee counties, and finally to the state of Missouri, where Estelle was employed as a teacher. In 1889 her parents returned to Holton, where she attended Campbell University and graduated from the short-hand and typewriting department. She was considered an expert in this line until her health was broken down. Miss Osbon was a good elocutionist, and at one time she won the prize at the Teacher's Oratorical contest of this county. About a year and a half ago, Estelle went to Colorado, thinking it would benefit her health, but at the end of one year her physician told her there was no hopes, and she came home to die with her mother. She suffered very much for several years, not only with consumption, but with sciatic rheumatism, which made her pain much more intense Death relieved Estelle Sunday morning, Sept. 11 The Kansas Sunflower, September 23, 1898.

Personals. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Poston and Mr. Wm. Poston of Netawaka, were in attendance at the funeral of their niece, Estelle Osbon, Monday. The Tribune, September 16, 1898.

3439. Daniel H. Sutherland was born in Sutherlandshire, Scotland, December 22, 1819. He received his education in his fathers home under a private instructor, according to the custom of the well to do of that day. His boyhood was spent in attending his father's flocks in the Scottish highlands, where nature in all her rugged beauty was his daily associate. At the age of 22 years he emigrated to Canada, where he remained with relatives for about one year, and then went to Nauvau, Ill., where he became associated with the Mormon church. For a few years he resided in St. Louis where he was engaged in buying and selling rafted timber. During his residence in St. Louis he became acquainted with Miss Jenet Collie, and on March 18, 1848, they were married and immediately moved to Salt Lake City, Utah. His intellectual abilities was soon recognized, and he was honored by being ordained elder, one of the 70, but as his broad comprehensive mind- as he became better acquainted with the tenants of the church, revolted at the violence done natures law, touching relations of the sexes, and he and his wife resolved to escape from the territory at the earliest opportunity-but this was not a easy task-suspicion of their intent had already been aroused, and their acts were watched with utmost vigilance, and it was by mere chance that they escaped being with the people who lost their lives in the "Mountain Meadow Massacre." Fortune favored their vigilance, and with an ox team they made the tedious and perilous journey, arriving at this place in 1859. Mr. Sutherland immediately took part and very materially assisted in the efforts that brought the territory of Kansas into the Union as a state January 29, 1861. He represented his district in the state legislature of 1861, which session had to deal mainly with question touching the states relation to the Union in the civil war. Brother Sutherland preempted the southeast quarter of section 20, town 5, range 15 in 1859, where he has since resided, and where he died on Tuesday, August 30, 1898, at the age of 80 years, 8 months and 8 days. Of his relatives so far as we know, none but his wife survive him. The Tribune, September 9, 1898.

She will make her home with them for the present. The Holton Recorder, September 8, 1898.

3440. Everest Enterprise: A sad accident happened Tuesday night during the storm. A mover with his wife and two children were encamped near the home of S. D. Black, who live a few miles south of this place, and had his wagon standing underneath a large tree. During the storm lightening struck the tree and from there transferred itself to the man, killing him instantly. The wife and children were shocked but were not otherwise injured. They are in a most pitiable condition. The woman has but one loose garment and that is so torn and thin that it does not conceal her nudity while the children are almost naked. We believe this is the saddest case of bereavement we have ever known. Death comes to the carpeted parlor, the stately hall; it invades the palace and the cottage; it touches with its destroying hand the king and the peasant; it calls with sepulchral voice the parent and child and brings everywhere grief and desolation. But when traveling in a strange land, death comes upon the wings of -flame with electric swiftness and amid the roar of heaven's artillery, snaps the slender, fragile cord of life and takes away the only protector, the sole provider, the last comfort and stay, the husband and father, how sad, sad the bereavement, how wild and utterly hopeless the sorrow, we, perhaps, can never know. The same family were in Whiting Tuesday morning inquiring the road to St. Joseph. The Whiting Journal, September 11, 1898.

3491. Rev. John Cole, one of the honored pioneers of Bureau county passed away at his Tiskilwas home Sunday evening, Nov. 13. He was born in Cumberland County, Kentucky, Jan. 9, 1812, and came to Illinois when ala-d fourteen years of age and settled in Union county. In 1831 he was induced to come to Bureau county and secured work of a farmer located in the eastern part of Hall township. In 1832 he went to Hennepin and enlisted in the service organized by the early settlers, for the defense of the people against the Indians. He was active in the operations against Black Hawk and his tribe. The company with which he gave honorable service to his country constructed Fort Wilbur at Peru and made this point of protection for the people. September 30, 1832, Mr. Cole was married to Miss Jane Tompkins, a native of east Tennessee, who with her parents came to this county among the first settlers. This wedding is said to have been the first preformed within the limits of the county, and of course was the subject of much interest at that time. Mr. Cole was then through with his duties as a soldier, and with his bride settled on a farm near Peru, which he operated for several years. Later he removed to 8faruz ne8rIf0[[ov/ayvi]]n, where he took up a claim upon a wild uncultivated tract of land and remained there for thirty years In 1866 Mr. Cole sold out his interest near Hollwayville and purchased ularge farm and town property at Iiekilv&uwhere he carried on a grocery business for a time, but subsequently went to Greenville township and engaged in farming. This venture seemed to have been the interest of his two sons, for Mr. Cole did not stay in that township himself Charles Cole, one of the sons, was a supervisor from Greenville township for six years. Mrs. Cole died April 18, 1891, at the age of 74 years, leaving two sons and three daughters. October, 1891, Mr. Cole was again married, this time to Mrs. Nancy Pembroke, a native of New York, and who was raised in the state of Ohio For twelve years during his residence in Selby township and four years after he went to Tiskilwa, he served the people as justice of the peace -_ in 1850ho\vaordained as a Methodist Episcopal minister ... was given a circuit in this section of the state and for forty years he proclaimed the gospel, part of the time as a]Ocal preacher GiIiski}vv&.... In the early days he was a Jackson democrat, but in 1850 left that party because of its support of the pro-slavery teachings. He was among the first in the ranks of the republican party The above article is taken from the Bureau county (Ill) Republican. 3631. One of the most atrocious murders ever recorded in the annuls of Jackson county was committed between Mayetta and Hoyt on Sunday afternoon about 5:30 p.m. Henry Sanderson had been given a home under the roof of W. H. Fleischer the past few months. He formerly lived with his parents in the Indian territory and since he came back to this country he has often taken up his abode with the Pottawatomie Indians. He was sort of a dare devil and through desperate acts while in the territory had become hardened and did not seem to realize the true meaning of crime. It appears during his residence with Mr. Fleischer he became infatuated with one of Mr. Fleischer's daughters, Miss Myrtle, who is but fifteen years of age, and several times made effects to secure her confidences, but his unwelcome advances were scornfully spurned by the young girl. It is said Sanderson several times threatened violence but not much attention was paid to his wild remarks. On Sunday afternoon about 5 o'clock, or shortly after, he came home from Hoyt, seemingly all right. Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Fleischer of Arkansas City were visiting at W. A. Fleischer's. Dennis Donnelly and wife were there spending the afternoon, Mrs. Donnelly being a daughter of W. A. Fleischer. When Sanderson arrived home from Hoyt, Myrtle Fleischer and Mrs. Rudolph were in the cow lot milking. They had finished milking and were started to the house with the milk. Mr. and Mrs. Donnelly had stepped out on the back porch to go to their team, which was hitched near the barn, intending to start for home. Sanderson had some time previous borrowed a 38 Winchester rifle from James Marshall who stays with Mr. James, living across the road from the Fleischer's. Looking out the window he, Sanderson, rather suddenly turned to Mr. Fleischer asking for the rifle. Fleischer asked him what he wanted with it, and he replied, "I want to take it home." The weapon that was soon to do a deadly mission was handed to Sanderson by the father of one of his intended victims. Stepping out on the porch he cocked the gun. Here he met Mr. and Mrs. Donnelly. At this time James Marshall, the owner of the rifle, rode up to Fleischer's barn intending to put his horse away, as Mr. Fleischer was renting him a stall. Donnelly started with Sanderson toward the barn, but just before meeting the women that were coming with the milk, Sanderson made a spring away from Donnelly towards the women. Going up to Mrs. Fleischer he pointed the rifle at her, the muzzle nearly touching her side, and fired. Mrs. Fleischer dropped to the ground shot through the abdomen. He quickly turned to Myrtle, who had started to run, and began firing after her, but his shoots went wide of their mark and she reached the house in safety. W. A. Fleischer hearing the first shot ran to the window to see what was going on got his shotgun and started after the murderer. Sanderson after firing three shots at the girl turned and fled towards the creek, back of the barn. When Mr. Fleischer started in pursuit, as he passed Mrs. Fleischer, who was still lying on the ground, she called to him not to follow as he would be killed; she also said, "don't kill him," making a plea for her slayer's life. When Fleischer got to where Marshall was, Marshall plead with him not to go after him because Sanderson had a Winchester which would carry further than his shotgun. On the edge of the bank of the creek, about seventy-five yards away, Sanderson was standing with his rifle in readiness to shoot anyone who would pursue. Mrs. Fleischer was taken to the house, while Marshall mounted his horse and started to Hoyt to summon medical aid. He also swore out a warrant at Hoyt for Sanderson's arrest. Mr. Rudolph Fleischer at the time of the shooting was in the house asleep. The hardened villain ran across the fields toward Mayetta, but his pursuers, who, had mounted horses, overtook him about a mile this side of Mayetta at the farm of Mr. Smith; an uncle of Sanderson. Here Sanderson intended to take refuge in the barn, but those in pursuit were almost upon him. He turned, raised his rifle and ordered them not to come one step nearer. He then ran behind a haystack where he found that one of the cartridges had become fastened in the rifle. Realizing he had no time to lose, as they were rapidly coming down upon him, he struck the butt of the rifle on the ground to loosen the ball, but a loud report and a deep groan told them that the rifle had discharged and wounded Sanderson. The ball entered the right arm below the elbow, completely shattering the bone. It was no trouble to arrest Sanderson then. He was taken to the hotel in Mayetta where two physicians attended to his wound. The sheriff was notified of the terrible deed and the whereabouts of the assassin. The crowd that had gathered at Mayetta was beginning to be very loud and fears were had that lynching might be resorted to, but after Sheriff Haas arrived he had no trouble getting his man to Holton safely. He was taken to J. Horr's restaurant where better medical attention could be given him than in jail, also on account of the jail being filled. Isaac

Briggs was placed in charge of Sanderson who attended to his needs, The tone of Sanderson, when conversing with some of our businessmen about the murder, was such that showed his brutal nature. He seemed to gloat over his crime. He also said that in the territory this would be called every tame affair, that down there it was nothing to shoot a person. People there didn't get so excited over such matters as they do here. The man did not seem to be in the least sorry for his atrocious deed. All day Monday there were rumors that the murderer would be lynched, but reports came from the neighborhood of the scene of the crime that everything was quiet. The prisoner was left alone with Mr. Briggs, his nurse, for the night. He went to sleep and apparently slept soundly until ten minutes after two in the morning Briggs heard sounds on the outside as of someone was approaching the house. The truth flashed upon him that it was a mob to lynch the man he was nursing. He awoke Sanderson and told him a mob was on the outside. The murderer arose in a sitting position in the bed and stared wildly and he heard the cries from the frenzied men on the outside demanding admission. Sanderson, realizing the situation, quickly asked, "Is there no place to hide so they cannot find me." Briggs told him he did not know of any place, and waited for the inevitable. The mob first went to the dining room door in the rear of the building and demanded that Mr. Hoff open the door. Mr. Hoff was slow in replying to their request, whereupon threats of shooting him and breaking down the door followed. Hoff opened the door and before him stood two men with revolvers pointing directly at him; behind them were about thirty more armed men. He was ordered to throw up his hands and march out through the snow and open the door of the room which Sanderson was in. They also said to him, "You must go with us." He plead with them that it would mean his death as his health is very bad and it was impossible for him to go as he was still in his nightclothes. His remonstrances were of no avail, until one of the men who seemed to know Hoff, spoke up saying, "Mr. Hoff is telling you the truth; the man is not able to go out." Just then a terrible crash was heard, the men had broken down the door of the rooms in which the murderer was locked. All but two deserted Mr. Hoff and rushed into the room to help get out Sanderson. But the two kept Hoff standing there, holding his hands above his head until Sanderson was taken out. Briggs says he turned down the light as soon as he heard the noises, intending to flash it when they entered, but he did not get the opportunity. He paid no attention to demands for admission, but kept quiet. When the door flew open they told him to throw up his hands and simply said, "We want to take away your man." As many as could got around the bed got hold of Sanderson and hustled him out and down the alley, back of the State bank where several were waiting with a wagon in which they throw him. Sanderson met the irate mob without a word or murmur and had not uttered a sound within hearing distance of Mr. Briggs. Mounting their horses and several wagons they started south on Pennsylvania Avenue. The nightwatch, Ed. Ernst, learning of what had happened at once notified the sheriff and others, M. D. Asher and the officers then followed the tracks of the wagon which left the alley back of the State Bank. On reaching the bridge across Banner Creek, south of Mayor Pomroy's they found Sanderson hanging to a rope, which was tied to the top beam of the truss of the bridge. His neck was broken. Here ended the tragedy that sent two souls to eternity. The mob did not consume over five minutes in securing their victim. They took Sanderson as they found him-nothing on but a sweater. They wrapped the blanket around his legs then tied his left hand and his feet, in which manner they threw him over the bridge and left him dangling at the end of about twelve feet of rope It is not known whom the men were that composed the mob but it is supposed they were from the south part of the county. Noah Sanderson of Mayetta, an uncle of young Sanderson took charge of the corpse and had undertaker Meek prepare it for burial. The funeral was held in this city ... Mrs. Fleischer lived until Tuesday morning at about 20 o'clock married only about two months ago. Her parents live at Purcell. She was about 18 years old ... The remains were taken to North Topeka where they were interred in the Rochester cemetery Sanderson has many relatives in this county who are among the best citizens. His parents reside in Oklahoma having moved there from this county at the opening of that territory. The Tribune, March 31, 1899.

3708. The death of Captain P. B. Rust in Oklahoma last week ends the career of one of the best known and in some respects the most eccentric character that ever lived in the county. Captain Rust enlisted as a private April 18, 1861, in Co. B., 12th Illinois infantry under the first call for three months men. After his discharge he recruited Co. E., 37th Illinois infantry of which he was commissioned Captain. He served in this organization about eighteen months, and was discharged on account of disability. He moved to this country during the latter part of the war Captain Rust was a very religious man and fanatical on both religion and politics. We had no acquaintance with John Brown, but imagine that he and Rust in their makeup were somewhat alike. Capt. Rust lived several months in this city last year and in the fall, with Mrs. Rust, went to Blackwell, Oklahoma, to live with a son. Some three or four weeks ago his mind became deranged and he was sent to the asylum at Norman, where he died. He was about 85 years of age. The Holton Recorder, June 22, 1899.

3717. George W. Drake, who died at his home four miles east and a mile north of this city last Sunday afternoon, was born in Zanesville, Ohio, in the year 1834. In the year 1860 he came to Kansas, and two years later, in the month of August, he was married to Miss M. M. Parrott. Three days after his marriage he enlisted in the 11th Kansas infantry, in which he served three years, until the end of the war. After the war he settled down and purchased some land, which is a part of the large tract he still owns He has always been a extensive stock raiser, and was sufficiently farseeing to generally make money in the business. While land around him was yet unimproved and comparatively cheap, he commenced adding farm to farm until at one time his holdings aggregated nearly 3,000 acres His fellow citizens in and about Holton, when they determined to get a court house built and thus permanently settle the county seat question, and also wanted to secure a rail'oad, recognizing his business qualifications and push, elected him a county commissioner. He did not disappoint their expectations. When he retired from the position Holton had a courthouse and a railroad. This was about 1872 or '73. Since then he has never asked for or held any office His education was only what was to be obtained in the common schools of his time He was capable of performing a great deal of hard work, and in these respects frequently taxed his physical powers until it astonished all that he did not break down. However, the break finally came. Last February, from the effects of exposure, he was taken sick and compelled to give up labor. His disease soon developed into something like dropsy or Fright's disease leaves a wife and six children. Three children preceded the father to the other side of the river The surviving children are, Mrs. Sue Allen, of Perham, Minn; R. Z. Drake, of Omaha, Neb; Mrs. J. R. Gamble, of Danville, Ill.; Mrs. Kate Schoonmake, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Misses Mattie and Nellie Drake, who are yet at home. The Holton Recorder, July 20, 1899.

.... He was large and strong in physique and equally so in mind and will power. He was born in Zanesville, Ohio, 65 years ago. In his early life in Ohio he taught school, among his pupils being his wife and her sister, Mrs. Vic Wheeler. He afterward became a constructor in railroad building and at this business naturally drifted west. He went to old Mexico where he helped construct the main railroad lines. He came from Mexico to Jackson Co. on horseback. The Parrett's had moved from Ohio to Jackson Co. An early attachment had formed between him and Miss Martha Parrott, who, as stated above, was one of his pupils when teaching in Ohio. This attachment, no doubt, had much to do about bringing him to Jackson CoIt is said that his land in Jackson Co. would form a tract eight miles long and four miles wide. He was interested in building the Kansas Central R.R. which traverses through his land. He also helped boom towns along this railroad. For a time he was president of the Holton City Bank but financial reverses caused the bank to close its doors His funeral services were held on Wednesday at the grove at the old homestead about six miles east of Holton at what is known as Drake's switch The Tribune, July 21, 1899.
