INTRODUCTION

After the compiling and printing of the Jackson County, Kansas, Bride and Groom Marriage Index, Volume I, I realized that I had erred in not using the many Jackson County newspapers, other than to check spelling on names that needed clarification. In consequence the marriages in this volume are from three sources; Jackson County, Ks., marriage license books, Jackson County, Ks., newspapers and Shawnee County, Ks., marriage affidavits.

Due to the problems of interpreting handwriting and spelling in old records, it's impossible to do a book of this kind without errors. Consider the following spelling of a familiar county name; Amon, Amen and Ammen. I am sure of the correct spelling of this name, but it has to be spelled in the index as it is spelled in the records. If you find an entry that you believe to be in error, a page with the heading, "CORRECTIONS", is included in the front of this book where you can make note of it.

It was the groom's responsibility to obtain the marriage license. A trip to the courthouse wasn't an everyday event, and some used the U.S. Mail service. A neighbor on the way to town may have been asked to pick up the license. This may be one reason for the disparity in information on some of the applications and that on the minister's returns. Not every license issued resulted in a marriage, and some were returned and the money refunded. Some couples were married and the minister neglected to send the information to the courthouse to be recorded. This led to incompleting entries in the record books.

A surprising number of marriage notices appear in county newspapers, ranging from lists of licenses issued during the month, printed in the winter when editors were looking for something to fill their pages, to full accounts of weddings, listing every guest and gift. This information has been used to fill out given names in marriage license books that only give an initial. The names appear in brackets, e. g., A[lbert]. If this shows up in an index entry, you will know that mention of the marriage is in some county newspaper. Those marriages giving a newspaper for references are for county residents, former county residents, and relatives of county residents who did not have a Jackson County, Ks., marriage license. Some items give no more than a hint, e. g. "John Doe returned from Colorado with a beautiful bride", but they may give a starting point on where to look for more information. Newspaper accounts should be viewed with suspicion, having been received second-hand by editors, and mention of a marriage could appear in four different newspapers, each giving conflicting details.

The surnames of the brides and grooms are arranged in alphabetical order, this results in each marriage appearing twice, once in the brides surname group and once in the grooms. In the first column, names are separated by abbreviation, the need arising due to incomplete entries in the marriage books. The second column gives the date of the event. The third column gives the reference for the record where the marriage was found.
