Early Citizens of Montgomery co., Kansas

The following are biographies of settlers which appeared in the History of Montgomery County, Kansas, published by L. Wallace Duncan, Iola, Kansas 1903

JOSEPH JACKSON--- The late pioneer, whose name is announced at the opening of this article, was a man of substantial business traits, was favorably known over a wide area of Montgomery county and, as a farmer, did an important work toward the reduction and improvement of his locality. His rise in the county was from a primitive beginning and when he died, August 14, 1900, his estate was one of the valuable ones of the county, growing out of efforts on the farm.

Joseph Jackson began life in the United States under somewhat embarrassing conditions. He was a foreigner, unacquainted with our ways and customs, and with little knowledge of our institutions. The first prospect that confronted him, on reaching America, was that of hard work in a coal mine in Luzerne county, Pennsylvania but he did not shirk. His life was ahead of him and he was ready to make the most of his lot. Such men deserve to succeed and most of them do. Out of the coal shaft, into the ranks of the Federal army, he helped fight the great battles for the preservation of the Union and the integrity of the flag. Back in the coal business, for a brief period, and then, to Kansas, recites the career of our subject, before his advent to Montgomery county.

A native of Northumberland county, England, Mr. Jackson was born Apr 24, 1831. His parents were William and Mary (Truby) Jackson, who brought their family to Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, about 1850. The father was a sailor in the early life and when he reached the coal fields of the "Keystone State", he went to work in a mine. His wife was a French lady and a daughter of a captain in the French army. They both died during the Civil War --- one day apart --- at about sixty years of age, and are buried at Tamaqua, Pennsylvania, in the M. E. churchyard. They left a family of five children, three sons and two daughters, namely: Henry, Robert, Joseph, Elizabeth, widow of John "Airy, and Catherine, widow of Jabez Phillips, of Pennsylvania.

Joseph Jackson was united in marriage, at the house of his parents, December 3, 1851 with Jane Bell, a daughter of Van and Jane Bell. Mrs. Bell died at thirty-eight years of age, while her husband passed away at the age of seventy seven. Mr. Jackson enlisted in 1862, August 8 in the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Illinois Volunteers, to which state he had migrated five years before. His enlistment occurred at Colchester and his regiment formed a part of the First Brigade, Third Division of the Seventeenth Corps. He participated in the battles of Raymond, Champion Hills, siege and capture of Vicksburg, battle at Jackson, and then his command was transferred to southern Alabama, where he aided in the assault on "Spanish Fort" and the capture of Mobile. He was at Vicksburg when the mine was exploded and was himself wounded at Champion Hills. The ball passed through his haversack and was checked to almost a spent ball, by penetrating through his plate and cap, which latter has been preserved to the family, as a relic of the days of war and a memento of the service of its worthy head. His wound was a serious matter to Mr. Jackson, for it penned him up in the hospital, out of which, upon his pleading, on one occasion, he was taken on an ambulance march, in order to keep along with his command. Although it healed, in time, the wound left its permanent effect with its victim. An incident occurred at Vicksburg, in which Mr. Jackson was a participant, which showed his courage and utter lack of fear. On one occasion, a Confederate pulled his pistol and made boasts of what he would do to the "Yanks" but before his threats were put into execution, Joe Jackson had relieved him of the weapon and told him to call the next morning, but he failed to call and Mr. Jackson brought the pistol home. August 15, 1865, the military life of our subject ceased. He was discharged in Chicago, as a sergeant, and at once rejoined his family in Colchester, Illinois.

Taking up civil pursuits again, Mr. Jackson bought a tract of coal land, upon which he sank a shaft and began the mining of coal. He employed a small force of men and did quite a business, shipping his product to Quincy, Illinois. In 1870, he gathered his substance, his family and his effects together and brought them to Montgomery county, where he purchased a wild tract of eighty acres of land on Onion Creek. As a farmer, he was pronouncedly successful. His management of his affairs seemed to keep them on the upward tendency and as his circumstances warranted, he added tract after tract, until his estate embraced five hundred and sixty-four acres. This, together with valuable residence property in Independence and a deposit in one of the city banks, constituted his estate at his death.

To Mr. and Mrs. Jackson were born the following children, namely: Mary J. wife of Walter Enness, of Colchester, Illinois; Van William, of Colorado, who married Effie Cox and has children: Joseph, Jennie and William, and Mattie and Arthur, deceased; Margaret, deceased, married Charles Redwood and left; May, Joseph, Albert and Eldred; Robert A. and Joseph H. both died in babyhood; Joseph 2d, of Independence, Kansas, married 14 August, 1883, and has children: Lillie M. Joseph, Jennie, Lizzie, John, Robert, Ethel, Floyd and Kate; Samuel C. H. (Champion Hills), was born the day his father was in that fight, married Hannah Gillard and has three children: Nellie, Stella and Flora; Lizzie, wife of Edward "Woody", of Independence township, has the following children: Calvin, Morrill and May; James, born November 30, 1869, married Rose Bailey, now deceased, himself died in November 1900, leaving children: Jennie, Eddie, Van, deceased; Walter, Maggie, deceased; Rose, deceased, and Mollie; and Belle, wife of Frank Hamblin of Independence, has a son Elmer.

Joseph Jackson and his wife brought their children up to believe in the sacredness of the Christian religion. They were both members of the Methodist church and lived consistent and upright lives. Mr. Jackson was a member of the Grand Army, was a Republican in politics, and, as a citizen and man, his life is worthy of emulation.

JOSEPH BERRY --- A patriot defending the cause which gave birth to the "Sunflower State," a pioneer subduing nature's wilds within her borders, a solid and substantial citizen, revered and honored throughout the length and breadth of Montgomery county --- this, in epitome, is the record of Lieutenant Joseph Berry, farmer of Sycamore Township.

William Berry, grandfather of Joseph, was one of the independent Irishmen who chose to leave the land of his birth, rather than to further stand the exactions of a selfish English monarch. He came to America, in the early part of the nineteenth century, and settled in the "Hoosier State," where he reared a family of thirteen children, their names being: William, James, Joseph, Isaac, Polly, Nancy, Cecelia, Sarah, Mark, Hannah, Samuel (two names not given). Of these, Mark married Christine Lozer, a native of Pennsylvania, and a daughter of Christopher and Ann (Rolland) Lozer, both natives of Switzerland. Their children were: Joseph, John (deceased), Elizabeth Archer of Ohio; Hannah Taylor, Mark and Christine, also of the "Buckeye State", and Ann Van Nortwich, now deceased. By a former marriage, to Polly Hughes, Mark Berry had one child, Polly, who, when last heard from, was living in Indiana.

The immediate family of Joseph Berry consists of wife and four children. Mrs. Berry was Mary Jane Hewitt, born in Jefferson county, New York, July 28, 1835, the daughter of George and Rebecca (Fisk) Hewitt. On the 1st of September, 1902, Mr and Mrs. Berry celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, amid the rejoicings of many friends and relatives. Of their children, Ida Tuttle, with her two children, Floy and Vesta, live in Purdy, Missouri; Ira H. is a locomotive engineer, lives in Joplin, Missouri; he has one son, Hollis, who served in the Philippine war; Effie Holbert, resides with the parents and has one child, Pauline.
