DALLAS COUNTY, MISSOURI

Dallas County, formed from Polk County in 1842, was originally named Niangua County. In 1844, the boundaries were slightly changed and the name changed to Dallas. The courthouse burned in October 1863, and burned a second time in July 1864 when all records were destroyed. The county suffered a third fire on 3 September 1867 when the replaced records were burned, also.

The 1150 marriage records here given were microfilmed by the compiler in the Office of the Recorder in the Courthouse at Buffalo, Missouri. The earliest book of marriages now in existence is Book "A", beginning in September of 1867 and continues through July 1873. Book "B" follows immediately and closes in September 1880. Both books are in very bad condition and are in need of rebinding. The names in the indexes are crowded and the script is difficult to read, however, the surnames were copied into the margin of the books at a later date, and these proved to be most helpful.

The spelling throughout the registers is understandably poor since many of the early day ministers and justices spelled phonetically. The compiler has tried to copy the names exactly as they appear in the originals, making no change, even though she may realize that it is incorrect. Quite often the marginal spelling does not seem to agree with the original script, and when this occurs, the index version is placed in brackets immediately following the name. All information of genealogical value has been abstracted.

A "Key" to the names of the ministers and officials who performed the ceremonies will be found in this book beginning on page 47.

The pen drawings in this book are the work of William A. Guyselman, Recorder of Macon County, Mo., 1860-1870, and are included in Marriage Book "E" of Macon County.
