PREFACE

This index was prepared from microfilm copies of the original censuses. The surnames, but not the Christian names, in the eighth and ninth censuses were checked against the original census in the National Archives, Washington, D. C.

Page numbers that are preceded by 5- are from the fifth (1830) census; by 6- are from the sixth (1840) census; by 7- are from the seventh (1850) census; by 8- are from the eighth (1860) census; by 9- are from the ninth (1870) census; and by 10- are from the tenth (1880) census. When a page no. is followed by ", the name occurs twice on that page; when it is followed by '", the name occurs three times on that page.

The original records bear as many as four series of page numbers. I used the following:

| | | |
|------|-----|----------------------|
| 1830 | 5- | script, upper left |
| 1840 | 6- | stamped, upper right |
| 1850 | 7- | script, upper right |
| 1860 | 8- | script, upper right |
| 1870 | 9- | stamped, upper right |
| 1880 | 10- | stamped, upper right |

If a name was abbreviated in the original, it is abbreviated here. If the same name was both abbreviated and spelled out, it is usually spelled out in this index. Eliza and Elizabeth, Alex and Alexander, and many other comparable pairs were considered to be different names.

It is possible to identify the political township and sometimes villages and towns in the last four of these censuses (the pages in 1860 may be inaccurate):

* Enumeration District

These censuses were prepared by a total of at least twenty-two enumerators. Some wrote neatly and legibly, some did not. The ink in most of the 1860 census has faded very badly: this would be a better index if that census had been excluded. It is generally well known that script e and i, o and a, n and u, and m and w are difficult to distinguish, and that there is a tendency to scribble the last half of a word or name. Less well known are the L and S that are rarely distinguishable. Then, as now, the wide slash over a t, and the l that was not looped (unless it was as low as an e), made the names Haller, Halter, Hatler, and Hatter, for instance, indistinguishable. Since horizontal lines were fainter in the original than vertical lines, some of them disappeared, and a became u, t became l, g became y; the dot over an i disappeared to make an e, or it may have been inserted near an e by an occasional accident on the paper or on the microfilm. When a capital is followed by lower-case letters, these lower-case letters put certain useful restrictions on identifying the capital letter, restrictions that are missing in the case of initials: very few periods or dotted i's remain in the original. The initials given here are, accordingly, less reliable than the names. The ss that can easily be confused with p, ps, or fs is fairly well known. There were at least two forms for x: one appears to be sc, the other, n. There was often a final wiggle that meant anything--or nothing. Some of these names are best described as a capital letter followed by a series of blips. One blip is probably e, i, r, or v; two blips is any combination of those four letters, or n, u, a, o; and so on: Simmons cannot be distinguished from Summers, Smith appears to be Senith, and Hendricks was occasionally recorded as Henducks, for instance. Some of these scribes expressed their individuality in the way they formed capital and final letters: they seemed to make them differently line by line, page by page, and day by day, and an initial differed from the same letter that was part of a name. Sometimes a capital "covered" the second letter of a name. F and T: l, J, S, and L; Jas and Jos (if you seek either of these names you should look under both abbreviations; Janus and James; May and Mary; Pr and R: h and te; b and le; v and r; f and s: John and Jehu were, accordingly, difficult to impossible to distinguish. Phonetic spelling appears to have been more widely taught and/or practiced then than it is now. When a name was written over, one was selected. Several Christian names were used for both sexes. Some of the unnamed infants were considerably more than a year old! No one scribe committed all of these sins--but some of them tried! I am fortunate that I do not have to read my own writing.

IV

The names are reproduced exactly as they appear in the original: even obvious errors in spelling have not been corrected. Sometimes when a family was listed on successive pages, the name had a different spelling on the two pages. When this occurred, the first part of the family was indexed under the first spelling of the name, and the remainder under the second spelling of the name: I have no way of determining which spelling is correct. The "see" references are based on (1) one interpretation in the original typing of a serial list, and another in the subsequent check, (2) phonetic spellings, and (3) error spellings. They do not relieve the investigator of the necessity for the usual search for variant spellings, phonetic spellings, and misspellings. The cross references in a large city telephone directory might be helpful. You are reminded that there is no identity or even similarity in the way the owner, the census enumerator, a descendant, or I spell(ed) the family or given name. Another person can correctly arrive at an interpretation different from mine.

I hope you find the name you seek in this index. If you do not, read the two paragraphs before this one, respell the name, and try again. Good luck!

These years were a time of rapid population growth in this county. The count of heads of families in the 1830 and 1840 censuses is mine, and it may differ slightly from the official figure, if there is one.

| | Census Year | Total number | Slaves | Heads of families | Names in this index |
|-----|----------------|-----------------|--------|----------------------|------------------------|
| 5- | 1830 | 2,942 | | 408 | 408 |
| 6- | 1840 | 7,198 | | 935 | 935 |
| 7- | 1850 | 9,439 | 2,156 | 1,157 | 7,273 |
| 8- | 1860 | 11,407 | 2,619 | 1,216 | 8,788 |
| 9- | 1870 | 15,908 | | 2,713 | 15,908 |
| 10- | 1880 | 22,751 | | 4,478 | 22,751 |
| | | | | | 56,063 |

Since work on this index has extended over sixteen years, it is highly unlikely that I have been consistent in transcribing these names.

Those who seek additional genealogical data for Randolph County are referred to a History of Randolph County, Missouri, by Alexander H. Waller, 1920; to a History of Randolph and Macon Counties, Missouri, published by the National Historical Company, St. Louis, 1884; to a compilation in 7 volumes of Randolph County Cemetery Records, by Elizabeth Ellsberry: Administrations and Wills, 1836-1858, Ellsberry: Early Marriage Records, 1829-1859, Ellsberry (most or all within the past decade).

The Arkansas Co., Inc., of Newark, N. J., loaned me a microscope, which I used to read microfilm. Mrs. Carrie Lee Young, of Hardin, Mo., corrected portions of the 1880 census. Many courtesies were extended to me by the staffs of the Ohio Historical Society Library, of the Ohio State University Library, and of the State Historical Society of Missouri. I appreciate all this assistance.
