FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

There are moments in man's mortal years
When for an instant that which long has lain
Beyond our reach is on a sudden found
In things of smallest compass, and we hold
The unbounded shut in one small minute's space,
And works within the hollow of our hand. .

PROFS, ETC.

TO THE GRADUATING CLASS OF 1970:

Dear Friends:

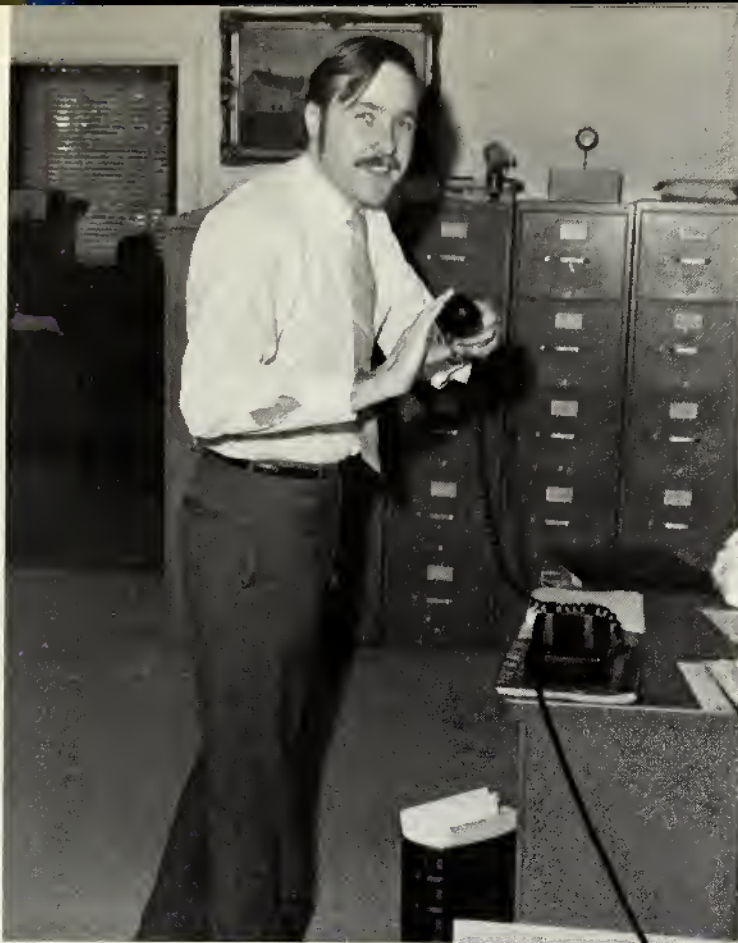

Somewhat more than a half century ago, Theodore Roosevelt delivered on this campus his last address at a college. Perhaps you have noted the marker on the Student Union lawn commemorating that event.

The former President observed that "This is the kind of school that builds character and trains for the highest type of leadership." Over the years, that has remained one of our College's prime objectives and a basic reason for being.

Never has a high type of leadership been more needed in the life of our nation. I hope that out of your years at Rocky you may have found direction, encouragement and resolve to be a part of that informed and concerned citizenry which is so desperately needed in today's world.

Our very best wishes go with you.

Sincerely,
