PREFACE

In this census of nearly four thousand people are names of men (and a few women and children) who were native to all parts of North America, to South and Central America and Canada, to Europe and Asia and Australia, and to the islands of the Atlantic and the Pacific. Furthermore, they had come from all walks of life. Some later returned from whence they had come and took up their lives more or less where they had left off. Others did not return.

These are names mostly of men who for reasons of their own chose to go to the southern mines, and who, for a time at least, resided in Stockton or in the outlying area--already organized as San Joaquin County.

The man whose name stands first had, like some others, come before the gold rush; and he it was who had mapped out the whole lower area of the principal gold region of the state. This area was called "the southern mines", to distinguish it from the mines that stretched out from Sutter's Fort at Sacramento.

The reader will find this record an interesting sequel to Volume 1 of GOLD RUSH DAYS (vital statistics, 1850-1855, of San Joaquin County).

Note: (1) This record disproves a statement in at least one history that no Chinese had come this early. Erroneously, they were recorded as of the white race. (2) Poor penmanship has caused some errors in interpretation. If the reader can identify such an error, word from that person will be appreciated.
