THOMAS POOLE
Justice of the Peace
Santa Barbara County, California

When Thomas Poole arrived in the United States from Scotland in 1888, he hoped to become a gardener in Ventura, California.

There were no estates there which required a gardener, so Thomas joined his brother, Peter, doing stone work. They worked on several large structures, including the stone Bank of Ventura building and a huge stone building on the Crocker Ranch, Montecito. Today this building serves as the Clubhouse for Birnam Wood Golf Club.

In 1890 Thomas was employed on a lemon ranch in Montecito where he worked for eight years. He then worked with his brother doing stone work on the estate of Cameron Rogers on Glendessary Lane in Santa Barbara and was given the job of gardener there for fourteen years.

In 1912 he became Santa Barbara's first "motorcycle cop". He decided he could better himself by seeking a post as constable. He served ten years, until Judge George, in whose court he was employed, died.

His friends urged him to seek the appointment as successor to Judge George. "I went before the Board of Supervisors with my resignation in one hand and my application for the position of Justice of the Peace in the other. I handed over first the resignation, then the application. They handed me back my appointment."

He performed his first marriage on his first day in office, which was the 17th of October 1928.

The following are his records of the marriages he performed between 1928 and January 1935.

During the six years he remained in the court he married 526 couples. The number at the bottom left of each page are the total marriages performed and the numbers on the right side of the page is the amount he was paid to perform the ceremony. He was the last Justice of the Peace to fill that office before it was reserved for members of the California Bar.
