Osage County is in north-central Kansas and is bounded on the west by Wabaunsee and Lyon counties, on the south by Coffey county, on the east by Franklin and Douglas counties, and on the north by Shawnee county. In extent it is twenty-four miles east and west, and thirty miles north and south.

Osage County was originally created as Weller County in 1855, name was changed to Osage County, 11 Feb 1859 and organized Mar 1859. Osage County was named for Osage tribe of Indians. On 23 Feb 1860, the Legislature passed an act, attaching the nine mile stripe formerly belonging to Shawnee, to Osage county, its present boundaries being establishes (4). The county seat is Lyndon area (formerly Burlingame).

In the year 1827, the United States Government opened a mail route from Independence, MO., to Santa Fe, N.M., on the route that had been selected some time before by the frieghters, and known as the Santa Fe Trail. This was the finest natural road in the world, and the immense freighting business over it continually increased, until 1854, millions of dollars worth of freight was transported over it annually. The road entered the present Osage County from the east. about on the lines between Township 14 and 15, extended west, crossing One Hundred and Ten Creek and continuing in nearly a direct line to where Burlingame now is, and up what is now Santa Fe Avenue in that town, and thence west crossing the western boundary of the county (4). Early pioneers and settlers may have been buried in this county as the Santa Fe Trail passes through it (along Highway 56).

This map includes 34 cemeteries in Osage County.

The following is compiled from tombstone inscriptions, some of the available interment records, some obituaries, and some of the availbale funeral home records.
