CLEARWATER CEMETERY

The "new" or present Clearwater cemetery was established in the late 1880's when John T. Craig, who owned the land directly north of town, sold a portion of it for that use. He lived on the corner one mile north where Bill Hammers now lives.

The older part of the cemetery is in the middle of the area "where all the old, big trees stand." A second part south of that was added shortly later.

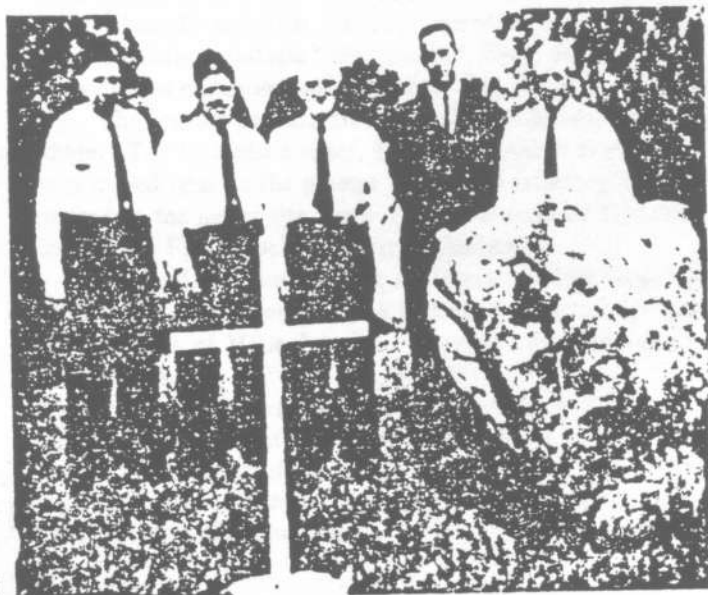

According to city records, several persons were moved here from the cemetery on the west part of town. Some of the early burials recorded by W.E. Keller were: Infant Gustafson, whose parents were Charles and Mary Gustafson of northwest of town, 1888; P.A. Peterson, 1888; Josiah B. McLaughlin, 1895; Lizzie Murry, 1893; Louis Geisendorf, 1893; Mary Cummins, 1890; Dwight M. Craig, 1881; Marian Chambers, 1890; Mary Hammers 1881; Phoebe Hammers, 1885; Jas. McCulley, 1889; A.H. Procter, 1888; James Snavelly, 1896; Richard Tillinghast, 1895; and Grace Eva Withrow, 1893.

One stone in this older area is a small, crude cement block with the initials R.G. scratched on it. R.G. stands for Jas. Richard Gorin, who died July 13, 1893. One of the streets in Clearwater is named Gorin as he was an early settler here.

Cemetery records of the late 1890's and the early 1900's listed causes of death. Some noted, unheard of today, were Brights disease, typhoid fever, cholera, consumption, diphtheria, la grippe and "old age." Some diseases spelled differently were "pendicitus," "cronic constipation," "bronicitis" and "newmonia."

The American Legion conducts services each Memorial Day at the flagpole where they have placed a large rock. The inscription reads: "In memory of those who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, dedicated to Sgt. Ernest D. Gordon, Co. K. 38th Inf., killed in action near Romange, France, Oct. 9, 1918."

The Clearwater city council minutes of April 1, 1903 state: "the mayor presented the proposition to permit the public to put down a well, erect a windmill and storage tank in the cemetery." On June 1, 1904, a steel fence was ordered and in August the fence was installed and painted.

LaVerne Darling raises the American flag at Memorial Day Services, 1983.

The Clearwater Cemetery District was created June 11, 1943 by the board of county commissioners, to handle cemetery business, improvements and to maintain the Clearwater cemetery, the Harrington cemetery, the Noel cemetery and the Ruby cemetery. The three-member board includes the mayor of Clearwater and trustees from Ninescah and Ohio townships.

Gradually the cemetery has been increased in size. The last addition to the north was acquired from Bill Hammers, who owns the adjoining property.

Memorials for Our Dead

As the living moved in to settle the Kansas prairies, a place to bury their dead became necessary. Many pioneers were buried along the wagon trail. Outlaws were buried where they were killed. Many lone graves probably dot the countryside. One area of several unmarked graves is in the Sackett Grove area. Some other places are marked, fenced and are known only to neighbors. Other graves are unmarked in pastures and groves. Soon land was set aside for cemeteries.

This cottonwood tree is a memorial for early-day pioneers.

OLD CLEARWATER CEMETERY

The first pioneers settled on the Ninnescah river but later moved to the present Clearwater site. Settlers came from Scotland, Sweden, Germany and "back east in the states."

T.J. Macredie gave the land for Clearwater's first cemetery. It is located south of the main street and directly east of the railroad tracks on the very west edge of town: The late Ida (Mrs. Alex) Macredie told that the T.J. Macredie family was large and several children contracted the "croup." Three daughters and two sons died in childhood and were buried in the prairie grass nearby. The grandfather and grandmother of Alex also were buried there. T.J. Macredie's sister, Mrs. Ross, who was buried there, was moved later to the present Clearwater cemetery. Two others moved to the newer site were Ed Rochette and a Stewart, both relatives of Frank Rochette, west of Clearwater.

Two Swedish pioneers from northwest of Clearwater known to be buried there were Mrs. A.F. Holmstedt and John Benson. A tiny sister of Matie Johnson Jenetzky is there also as are unknown others.

A cottonwood tree stands as a memorial for those early pioneers. It was brought to this location from the banks of the Ninnescah river, south of town. At one time, one area containing four lots was surrounded by a little iron fence with a small gate, but they have disappeared.

THE SENTINEL OF THE GRAVES

*The silent line moved quietly on.
The wagon wheels turned slow.
For one of them now was gone
To rest in silent row.*

*Respectfully, they gathered there
The pioneers of the land.
And solemn bow their heads in prayer.
God only understands.*

*They parted there in tears and sorrow
The wagons turned away.
The flowers so fresh will fade tomorrow
As they who passed away.*

*The little markers by the graves
Put there by loving hands
Surrounded by the grass that waves
To fit in nature's plan.*

*A tree, a little cottonwood
Was planted there with care.
Beside a grave it bravely stood
Through weathers bad and fair.*

*Through many passing years it braved
The cottonwood grew tall.
Its roots reached out to touch each grave
God's love reached out to all
Oscar Johnson*
