

From "Business Biographies" in the Farm Bureau News, Aug. 3, 1933

The Farm Bureau News was published by the Island County Farm Bureau in Oak Harbor, WA between 1920 and 1950.

E. T. ADAMS

Oak Harbor's jeweler E. T. (Ed) Adams, is a man who enjoys his work.

"I would rather work with watches than do anything," he confided. Adams has followed the jeweler's trade all his life and was in charge of the repair department of Weisfield and Goldberg, well-known Seattle firm, before he was forced to leave the city because of poor health. Mr. and Mrs. Adams moved to Oak Harbor about two years ago.

Adams was born in Toronto, Ontario, Canada, in 1888 and was originally of English descent, his grandparents coming to Canada from England. He attended school at Toronto and after working two years as an apprentice to a watchmaker, attended the Canadian Horological Institute, a watchmakers' college.

Here he took a year's intensive training in the art of watchmaking.

"We were not only required to master the theory of watch construction, but also had to make all the parts of a watch," Adams said. He also had training in engraving and jewelry repair, though these are not his specialty.

In 1912 Adams came to Seattle, afterwards moving to Victoria, B. C., where he spent several years with the F. W. Francis jewelry firm. He soon returned to Seattle and finally came to Oak Harbor.

"Taking care of the garden and working around the house is my hobby I guess," smiled Adams. "I get a great deal of pleasure out of home-making and certainly like this Whidby Island climate."

E. T. ADAMS

Oak Harbor's jeweler, E. T. (Ed) Adams, is a man who enjoys his work.

"I would rather work with watches than do anything," he confided. Adams has followed the jeweler's trade all his life and was in charge of the repair department of Weisfield and Goldberg, well-known Seattle firm, before he was forced to leave the city because of poor health. Mr. and Mrs. Adams moved to Oak Harbor about two years ago.

Adams was born in Toronto, Ontario, Canada, in 1888 and was originally of English descent, his grandparents coming to Canada from England. He attended school at Toronto and after working two years as an apprentice to a watchmaker, attended the Canadian Horological Institute, a watchmakers' college.

Here he took a year's intensive training in the art of watchmaking.

"We were not only required to master the theory of watch construction, but also had to make all the parts of a watch," Adams said. He also had training in engraving and jewelry repair, though these are not his specialty.

In 1912 Adams came to Seattle, afterwards moving to Victoria, B. C., where he spent several years with the F. W. Francis jewelry firm. He soon returned to Seattle and finally came to Oak Harbor.

"Taking care of the garden and working around the house is my hobby I guess," smiled Adams. "I get a great deal of pleasure out of home-making and certainly like this Whidby Island climate."