Stocking Prior To 1915 Done Privately-First Open Season in 1927

(Editor's Note-The following is another of a series of articles issued by the state game, forestation and parks commission in the interest of hunting and sportsmen.)

Pheasant hunting is a sport enjoyed by thousands of Nebraskans annually. Because of the program of conservation carried out by the state, generally, Nebraskans can find the best of pheasant hunting right in their home state.

The pheasant now so common in Nebraska was unknown here at the turn of the century. Our pheasant is a hybrid developed from the Chinese and English pheasant with a bit of the Mongolian pheasant thrown in. Chinese pheasants were firt brought to this country in 1880 and stocked in Oregon. The English pheasant followed in 1887, when it was introduced in New Jersey. Through private efforts birds of both species were brought west to Colorado and Kansas. About 1900 to 1904 the first pheasants were noted in southern Nebraska. Later a few dozen birds were introduced here and from these beginnings grew Nebraska's estimated 3,300,000 pheasant population.

Prior to 1915 all pheasant stocking was done privately. In that year the state took up the work, but it was twelve years before the state had its first open season on pheasants. In October 1927, all of Wheeler county and all of Sherman county except three townships were opened to pheasant shooting for three days. The take was small, because of a bag and possesion limit of five cocks, the shortness of the season and the limited area open.

In 1928 nine counties in central Nebraska were opened for ten days and an estimated 25,000 birds were shot. Shooting was limited to cocks that year, as it was in 1929, when an estimated 50,000 birds were taken in eight counties in a ten day season.

Through careful conservation and propagation work in the years since the pheasant has been introduced into every Nebraska county, although as they have elsewhere. This is due to soil and vegetation conditions not the best for breeding. Nevertheless the pheasant now is found in every county in the state, although there are amny which have never been opened to hunting. Prospects are, with one or two years of favorable weather conditions, southeastern Nebraska will provide its share of sport for pheasant hunters.

Get Licenses Here Sundays

At least one Norfolk establishment will sell pheasant hunting licenses Sundays, starting this weekend, Bob Thomas of the Chamber of Commerce's tourism committee said Saturday.

Arrangements have been made for Long's Service Station, 1301 Norfolk Ave., to issue the licenses as a service to Nebraska and out of state hunters.

COMPLAINTS HEARD

There were some complaints last Sunday that hunters from other areas who planned to hunt in the Norfolk vicinity were unable to obtain heeness here.

Norfolk Daily News

Any other establishments normally open Sunday may obtain the licenses from the State Game Commission if they care to provide the service, said Thomas.

The issuing agency is paid 10 cents a license cents a license.

The pheasant season, Thomas noted, annually attracts thousands of visitors to Northeast Nebraska.

PLENTY BIRDS

Shooting in Northeast Nebraska has been above average, with lots of birds available but cover thick so that hunters are working hard for their limits.

A check of hunters showed that most farmers are granting permission to hunt on their land, with the request that hunters stay out of corn fields not yet picked. Some of the stalks are leaning from the wind and hunters might dan are them further.

Many Hunters Get Licenses Here Sunday

More than two dozen visiting hunters were served by the new weekend hunting license service at Long's Service Station, at the intersection of Highways 81 and 275.

The service was established Sunday by the Chamber of Commerce's tourism committee. On the preceding Sunday, first of the pheasant season, several carloads of out-of-state hunters found it impossible to obtain licenses.

One hunter said he heard about the accommodation to weekend hunters over Radio Station WJAG while in Mitchell, S.D. "OLD GENEALOGISTS NEVER DIE --- THEY JUST LOSE THEIR CENSUS"

SBC Genealogical Society, CA

"THE WATERTOWN GAZETTE" - Watertown, Wisconsin, February 7, 1902.

On January 14, 1902 J.R. Buchanan, formerly of Watertown Wisconsin now of Omaha, Nebraska delivered an interesting address before the Nebraska State Historical Society at Lincoln, Nebraska from which we take the following of local interest.

"There were only twelve houses in West Point, mainly a little colony of Germans from Watertown, Wisconsin conspicuous amongst them was the father and family of our present state treasurer William Stueffer."

Perhaps as conspicuous a settlement as any was a small colony of thirty-seven families of German Luthert is also from Watertown, Wisconsin who sought a new country where with their very limited means, all could locate together and support jointly a church of their faith. They were piloted to the present site of Norfolk in 1866 by Mr. Stueffer, their former townsman in Wisconsin who had proceeded them locating at West Point. One of their number, Mr. Braasch, in 1870 plotted the original town of Norfolk. Nearly all of that colony, with a numerous growth of children and grandchildren are still living there. A notable fact is cited by one of the descendants to the effect that the children and grandchildren of those pioneers, that were bred in Nebraska are larger of frame and usually more robust than their ancestors and they attribute this to the healthful invigorating climate.
